Welcome, Dollar Wheat.
Getting Ford Is Not Easy.
Religion, Nazi Style.

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

HOW WISE are the British, how calm, reminding you of a seahawk poised aloft, watching for a fish to appear, then diving and GETTING the fish.

Those modern "innocents abroad," Americans sent to London's conference, report that England "straddles everything, praises every plan, and refuses to agree on any."

Plans that innocent Americans suggest are not, in Europe's opinion, of any consequence. We were sent for first, to cancel the war debts. That, thank Heaven, hasn't been done.

Second, to keep the dollar, now free from the gold basis ball and chain, from becoming too active in this world, and promoting American trade.

Third, to cut down our tariff, and throw our manufacturers and workers into direct competition with the cheap labor and low living standards of other countries.

Nothing much has been done in any of these three directions thus far, praise to the Lord. So England simply sits, watches and straddles.

IN INTERNATIONAL affairs, our representatives in foreign countries may truly be called "innocents abroad." Americans are not so innocent in other directions.

For instance, we know something about tennis. In yesterday's games at Wimbledon five Americans won, and Ellsworth Vines, champion American, beat G. R. D. Meredith, English, in straight sets, 6-1, 6-2, 6-0. Why not make diplomats of our tennis players and tennis players of our diplomats?

Tennis is not important.

WHEAT THAT you could have bought a little while ago for 42 or 43 cents a bushel sold yesterday for one dollar on the grain market of Fort Worth, Texas.

Many farmers will welcome the battle cry:

HERBERT R. WILKIN, who is a Detroit banker of consequence, NOT a red Russian bolshevist, makes the interesting statement that the closing of banks in Detroit was done by Wall Street powers "to get" Henry Ford.

The accusation will interest Mr. Cummings, Attorney General of the United States, and President Roosevelt.

The financial gentlemen did not "get" Mr. Ford, an undertaking not easy in the case of a man with four or five hundred millions in cash on hand.

But whoever engineered the closing of those Detroit banks, if anybody did, caused hardship, worry and loss to tens of thousands that did not deserve such treatment.

The distinguished Mr. Pecora and the impartial and powerful attorney general might get more information from Banker Wilkin.

GABRIEL AND other angels, listening to Protestant church services in Germany, will notice changes if, as is expected, Dr. Ludwig Mueller becomes head bishop of the German Reich. Last Sunday in Koenigsberg's ancient Schlosskirche, built nearly seven hundred years ago, he demonstrated his views of religion, on a Nazi basis.

He preached only fifteen minutes, calling the Nazi revolution "God's hour for the German people," and introduced a loud, uniformed storm troopers' band, playing martial tunes, in place of an organ.

He changed the Lord's Prayer around considerably, introducing the words:

"For thine is the third Reich."

GRETA GARBO, young Swedish girl, came to Hollywood, earned a fortune in moving pictures. Now she buys a home in Stockholm, Sweden, and the average American says:

"Why couldn't she buy herself a bungalow in Hollywood, settle there, and show gratitude to the country in which she earned her money?"

That sounds convincing, but if a young girl from Brooklyn had gone to Stockholm, made a fortune and returned to buy a house in Brooklyn, the same average American would have said:

"Good little American girl. She may make money among those Swedes, but she comes here and spends it in the good old United States. Three cheers for her."

VATICAN CITY reveals the fact that the bomb explosion in the portico of St. Peter's Cathedral on Sunday was made in Spain. It was hidden in a basket such as peasants carry, to divert suspicion.

A Spaniard has been arrested. The crime is supposed to have been an act of retaliation for recent Vatican action in connection with seizure of church property and suppression of religious schools in Spain.

The person guilty of the outrage, if shown to be a Spaniard, is no friend of his country's new government, for such a crime, that might have endangered the person of the Pope, is calculated to stir up in Spain a revolution with which the new government could not cope.

OTHER CITIES will be interested in big New York's experiment, selling "baby bonds" direct to citizens, in denominations as low as $10, with 5½ per cent interest. That is a great deal more than a city like New York should pay, considering that Central Park alone is

Verona Afraid of Incriminating Self; Hearing Thursday

John J. Verona, Hill district boss, has shied at testifying before the federal grand jury election probers on the ground that he might incriminate himself.

This was revealed today as the Third Ward Republican chairman, haled before Judge Nelson McVicar for failure to answer questions in the grand jury room, asked for a hearing on his constitutional rights.

This was set for Thursday morning, when Verona's case will be pleaded by Attorneys Charles J. Margiotti and Edward G. Coll.

REPORTS OF CLASH

Reports that had leaked out, of a clash between Verona and Special Prosecutor Earl F. Reed, while Verona was before the inquisitors late yesterday, seemingly were borne out by today's developments.

Brought into court this morning, Verona was dismissed until Judge McVicar had before him the stenographic notes of Verona's testimony.

This afternoon, after scanning the record, the court suggested that Verona return to the grand jury room and formally plead his constitutional privileges in refusing to answer questions by Prosecutor Reed. This Verona did and was excused until Thursday's hearing.

JUDGE'S STAND

Judge McVicar in perusing the testimony said:

"If I had to make a decision now it would be that he must answer."

Reed told the court that Verona had refused to answer unless give assurance he was not a prospective defendant. Many of Verona's followers—election board members—already have been indicted.

Reed said:

"While we recognize that right it is only in questions that might incriminate him that he could take such a stand.

"He was asked if he had received a ballot box delivered to him at the Amerita Club on election night which he had a right to receive as an alderman. He refused to answer. He also refused to answer whether he had received a telephone call while attending a party the night before election.

"Verona replied: 'I am not answering any questions.'"

Many additional subp have been issued for the congressional election inquiry, bringing the to m than 1,300.

Mother of 12 Balked As Police Captain Seizes Weapon

Out of her purse an enraged mother of 12 children whipped a revolver in Morals Court today and tried to shoot her husband.

Courtroom attaches and spectators scurred about in disorder, but Police Capt. John Schnurr stepped from behind the woman, grabbed her firmly by the wrist and snatched the weapon.

Her husband, Joseph Ciletti, was, with good reason, fairly shaken by the surprise, but his wife, Mrs. Mary Ciletti, told Magistrate Thomas D. Jones:

"I would have shot him on the spot if I hadn't been disarmed."

The Cilettis live at 4501 Irvine street, Hazelwood. Married 26 years, Mrs. Ciletti at 42 is the mother of a dozen children.

She had her husband arrested after, as she said, he had beaten her because she told him their eldest daughter had left home.

In Morals Court, Joe was explaining that it was just "a little argument" when Mrs. Ciletti interrupted:

JJoe talked on, Mrs. Ciletti reached for her pistol, which contained his shells, and raised it to within a few feet of her husband's face.

Mrs. Ciletti said that she had bought the gun a few weeks ago, after her husband's beatings and talking had driven her frantic. Magistrate Jones asked:

"Suppose you had shot him?"

"Well, then, I would hold a funeral for him."

Both were held.

CHILD LABOR DOOMED BY NEW CODE

Industry Czar Told Of 100,000 New Jobs In Textile Mills

WASHINGTON, June 27.—(AP.)—Embarked on the tremendous experiment of lifting wages and reducing working hours, federal administrators of the industrial recovery law heard from the textile industry in their first hearing today that the "code of fair competition" presented would make jobs for more than 100,000 now idle.

George A. Sloan, president of the Cotton Textile Institute, made the estimate in an exposition of the agreement reached by more than two-thirds of the textile operators.

The increased employment, if realized, would raise to 515,000 the numbers at work on spindles and looms in north and south.

NO CHILD LABOR

With a throng listening intently in the expansive Department of Commerce auditorium, Sloan said application of the minimum wage provided ($11 a week in the north and a dollar less in the south) would greatly enhance the purchasing power of all the workers affected.

Sloan predicted that within 60 to 90 days after adoption of the proposed code, child labor would be eliminated from the industry.

Without mentioning the tariff by name, he made it plain the textile industry would expect to be protected from foreign competition against possible loss of markets because of increased costs resulting from the code.

STOCKS ADD HEAVY GAINS

Spectacular Advances Made by Wheat in Seething Turnover

The advance in stocks carried leading issues $1 to $6 higher in a fresh outburst of speculative enthusiasm under the return of $1 wheat to the Chicago Board of Trade for the first time in three years. Shares were in restless demand all during the session, which swept aside tremendous waves of profit-taking.

With the May, 1934, wheat delivery crossing $1.06 a bushel and other months up 7 cents or so at the best, grain markets were wildly excited. Heavy realizing was easily absorbed.

Cotton rose about $1 a bale here, then became unsettled and at one time was quoted under Monday's final prices.

Foreign exchange fluctuations worked against the dollar. Gold currencies, which had reacted yesterday in the face of reports that Holland was to leave the gold standard, strengthened today. Sterling crossed $4.26 to a new high since England left the gold standard, and was up more than a cent.

The rise in gold monies countries still tied to gold would fight for the maintenance of that standard.

BROKER'S SON ELOPES AGAIN

Another romance has blossomed in the life of Harry Christian May, Jr., son of a Pittsburgh broker.

Following his divorce in February from Betty Lewis May, daughter of the president of the Harbison-Walker Refractories Company, young May eloped the following month with Kay Francies, of 32 Center avenue, Emsworth, the bride's mother announced today.

Miss Francies is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Francies. Befor her graduation from Hood College in June, 1932, she was maid of honor to the May Queen.

May and his new bride passed through Washington, Pa. yesterday on a belated honeymoon.

At the bridegroom's home today, his mother, Mrs. Harry C. May, corroborated the report of the marriage. She said:

"I am very happy with my new daughter-in-law. I am pleased with Kay, as is my husband."

May's first youthful romance began when he met Betty Lewis at a Shady Side Academy dance. They eloped to Wellsburg, W. Va., November 27, 1929. She was 15 at the time. They separated October 28, 1930.

Judge John P. Egan in February gave Mrs. May her divorce on grounds of desertion.

Italian Air Armada Meets New Delay

ORBETELLO, Italy, June 27.—(AP.)—The takeoff of 25 Italian seaplanes on the first leg of a flight to Chicago was again delayed by adverse weather conditions today, but orders still were to leave on the first favorable day.

Capone's Successor Held on Tax Charge

CHICAGO, June 27.—(AP.)—Murray Humphreys was indicted by the federal grand jury today charged with violation of income tax laws.

Successor to Al Capone as Chicago's arch gangster and "public enemy number one," he was accused on the same charge that sent Capone to Atlanta Federal Penitentiary.

HAWKS URGED TO HUNT FLIER

CHICAGO, June 27.—(AP.)—The Chicago sponsors of the flight around the world on which Jimmie Mattern became lost in the Arctic today appealed for Frank Hawks, famous speed flier, to fly in search of Mattern.

Attorney S. J. Sackett, one of the backers, said he was confident Mattern still lived, probably stranded in the Arctic and struggling to reach some means of communication.

Sackett said that he, Harry Jamieson, Hayden Mills, and Jack Clark, all of Chicago, had joined in the appeal to Hawks. Sackett said:

"We are confident Mattern has not perished. He was capable and had a good plane. Most important of all, he was not foolhardy. There might have been a mishap, but we all believe Jimmie would have been able to make a landing under any conditions."

1,300 Drys Face Ax as Two States Vote on Repeal

WASHINGTON, June 27.—(AP.)—Attorney General Cummings announced today that more than 1,300 employes of the Prohibition Bureau will be furloughed or dismissed June 30 to save $4,000,000 in the coming fiscal year.

Among the employes to be dropped, the Attorney General said, are administrators, attorneys, investigators, special agents, secretaries, stenographers, typists and clerks. Eighty-nine will be dropped in Pennsylvania.

Their names were withheld.

The Attorney General's announcement said:

"The last session of Congress appropriated $8,300,000 for the purpose of carrying on prohibition enforcement, but under the plan of reorganization contemplated for the Prohibition Bureau, Director of the Budget Lewis Douglas ordered a saving of $4,000,000 to be made."

Pirates and Giants Rained Out Again

NEW YORK, June 27.—For the second day in a row, the Pirates and Giants were prevented from playing at the Polo Grounds today, wet grounds intervening. The scheduled doubleheader will be played tomorrow.

The first of a series of articles analyzing the Home Owners' Loan Act and explaining how individuals may use government aid to prevent the loss of their property appears today on First Page of Second Section.

JURIST FAILS TO END RIFT

Judge Thomas M. Marshall assumed the role of peacemaker unsuccessfully today when Dr. Daniel L. Ressa sought a reduction in the alimony he is paying his wife, Elizabeth Ressa, from whom he asks a divorce.

Judge Marshall talked with the Ressas and later announced he had failed to persuade them to adjust their differences. He said he was aware professional men had suffered during the depression, and that when Dr. Ressa pays up his back alimony he will reduce the amount for three months from $60 to $45 a month.

The court stipulated that the wife may rent any or all rooms in their home at 6320 Jackson street, and the garage, for her maintenance.

City Sells Bonds At Record Premium

A $900,000 city bond issue was sold today to the Chemical Bank & Trust Company of New York at $947.030. Mayor John S. Herron said the premium on the bonds was the highest the city ever received on an issue.

Twelve bids, eight from outside the city, were submitted. The bonds were divided into amounts of $100,000 for water works improvements, $500,000 for direct welfare relief and $300,000 for work relief. They will bear interest of 4½ per cent.

Kahn Denounces Banks' Spree on Foreign Bonds

By WM K. HUTCHISON
International News Service.

WASHINGTON, June 27.—A scathing attack by Otto H. Kahn, head of Kuhn, Loeb & Co., the New York private banking firm, on American bankers who paid excessive prices for foreign bonds to unload them on American investors in the boom years, today featured the resumed Senate banking inquiry.

Kahn told how American bankers engaged in "cut-throat" competition to gain control of foreign bonds, particularly South American issues.

These were the bonds, bringing high prices in the boom years, that brought wreck and ruin later to American investors and American banks when values crashed.

'CUT-THROAT BUSINESS'

Kahn said his firm never engaged in this "cut-throat business."

One significant revelation was the fact that Kuhn, Loeb & Co., noted as a great international banking firm, drews its money home from Europe after the 1929 stock market crash.

While reducing its foreign deposit, the international financiers suddenly began buying United States government securities in 1930 and continued to do so until

The Britons' victory evened the series at two triumphs each, and gave them possession of the trophy for two years. The results of today's singles competition:

Sleeping Driver Hurt in Smashup

Falling asleep at the wheel of his automobile, according to the police report, Jacob S. Goldstein, 43, of 2523 Beechwood boulevard, was injured seriously today when the car struck a tree in Bigelow boulevard.

Goldstein was taken from the wreckage by Sylvester Prendergast, of Pine Hollow road, McKees Rocks, a motorist. At Montefiore Hospital it was said Goldstein suffered internal injuries, a fractured jaw, fractured ribs and face lacerations. A reckless driving charge was lodged against him.

Mutual Consent Divorce Near, Scientists Told

CHICAGO, June 27.—(INS.)—Divorce by mutual consent will in a short time find acceptance in law in the United States, it was predicted today before a group of eminent sociologists meeting here in conjunction with sessions of the American Association for the Advancement of Science.

Arguing in favor of breaking marital bonds at the will of the parties involved, Dr. Charles R. Metzger, of the University of Indiana and Butler University, explained:

"The feeling prevails that the time has come when divorce by mutual consent should be considered dispassionately with the idea of modifying the wishes of the people."

Dr. Metzger explained that the plan has nothing to do with, nor is it intended to be part of any scheme for companionate marriage, trial marriage or any other proposed form of marital experiment.

"Advocates of the mutual consent plan are not seeking an easier manner in which divorce may be secured, but simply a more honest and decent procedure than exists in the United States at present.

"The laws of the several states should provide that a husband and wife who find their marriage intolerable should have the right to present to the appropriate court a joint petition asking that such court enter a decree terminating the marriage."

Dr. Metzger decried the variety of subterfuges under which divorces are obtained at present.

Women Try to 'Scrape' Detective Off Car

Two women who were alleged to have trapped a detective on the running board of their automobile and then tried to scrape him off against a telephone pole, were fined in North Side Police Court today.

Mrs. Bessie Smith, 26, of 111 East Ohio street, and Mrs. Billie Seigel, 23, of 607 West Diamond street, wanted for questioning, according to the police, drove past the North Side Police Station last night. Police followed them in a scout car.

Detective James McKnight accosted the women in their parked car at North avenue and Federal street. When he stepped on the running board, he said, Mrs. Smith drove off and closed the window of the machine so that his hand was held fast.

After a zig-zag ride in which they nearly scraped a pole, McKnight said he drew his revolver and Mrs. Smith stopped. She was fined 25 or 30 days and the Seigel woman $10 or 10 days by Magistrate Ray Schneider.

MOLEY REACHES IRELAND; HOPEFUL ON PARLEY OUTLOOK

Roosevelt's Special Envoy Foregoes Trip by Plane

BULLETIN.

PLYMOUTH, Eng., June 27.—(INS.)—Prof. Raymond Moley, chief of President Roosevelt's "brain trust," arrived here this evening aboard the liner Manhattan to survey the situation confronting the World Economic Conference at first hand.

COBH, Irish Free State, June 27.—(AP.)—Assistant Secretary of State Raymond Moley, who had intended to land here and fly to London, where he will attend the World Economic Conference, changed his plans today and decided to proceed to Plymouth aboard the steamship Manhattan.

The Manhattan is due to reach Plymouth about 6:30 p. m. today (1:30 p. m., E. S. T.), and Moley therefore is scheduled to reach London at 11:30 p. m. (6:30 p. m., E. S. T.).

SALUTES IRISH

On arrival here, Moley said:

"On this, my first approach to Irish soil, I salute the Irish Free State and the Irish. In pursuance of the plan made before the London Economic Conference that I go there during the sittings, I am en route to that capital, bringing to Secretary Hull, chief of the American mission, and his fellow American delegates reports of recent economic and legislative developments in Washington.

"Herbert Bayord Swope is, at the President's request and my own, associated in this mission.

"In my country, the conference is regarded as being on the road to results helpful to each nation and to the world.

FOREGOES AIRPLANE

The assistant secretary, who had conferred with President Roosevelt before his departure from America, previously had planned to take an airplane to Croydon Airport from Cobh, in order to save time so he could join in the deliberations immediately.

He said:

"Surely as all nations, big and little, are represented at the conference, it cannot but be productive of good."

The American added that "all my reports are that everything is going on according to my plan."

M'Reynolds Denies U. S. Has Gone Nationalistic

LONDON, June 27.—(AP.)—Representative Sam D. McReynolds, addressing the commercial economic conference today, struck back at charges that the United States had gone nationalistic.

As asserted monetary stabilization should be undertaken by all nations rather than only three or four.

The Tennesseean delegate spoke in a private meeting but his address was made public later at American headquarters. The speech created much comment in conference circles, particularly because he took an opportunity to dive into home politics.

Mr. McReynolds, who is chairman of the House of Representatives foreign affairs committee, agreed with foreign spokesmen that the American tariff act of 1930 was unjust and he explained it was a Republican measure.

He ascribed President Roosevelt's election in part to discontent over a high protective tariff.

Referring to the failure of the President to ask and receive tariff-making powers from Congress, Mr. McReynolds gave assurance that "any agreement reached," which the President approved, "will be ratified by Congress."

Meanwhile, Great Britain was understood in well informed quarters this evening to have refused to commit herself to a new European gold bloc scheme under which British and continental currencies would be stabilized irrespective of the desires of the United States.

In responsible British circles this move, headed by France, was described as an effort to split England and America so that they would be unable to deal independently on stabilization.

England, it was stated, wants to keep her hands free so that she can deal directly with America on stabilization when the proper time comes.

the Constitution was put to a vote of the people.

The apparent lack of interest among the voters alarmed both the wet and dry forces, who had counted upon a heavy turnout to the polls.

In the eastern section of the state, the vote was reported about 50 per cent of normal, while in the southern section the balloting was less than 25 per cent of normal.

Ardent dry leaders in some cities had church bells rung at noon in the hopes of attracting voters to the polls.

Drys Concede Defeat In California

SAN FRANCISCO, June 27.—(AP.)—Proposed repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment comes before the voters of California today with prohibition leaders generally conceding defeat.

They include Dr. A. H. Briggs, superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League of California, who predicts, however, that the 800,000 "wet" majority by which state prohibition was dicarded last November will be "greaty reduced." Only two of the 58 counties, Riverside and Orange, both in the south, voted against repealing the state act.

Gov. James Rolph, Jr., who has pictured the grape industry as "shackled" by prohibtion, is among those calling on the people to place California in line with the 14 states which already have favored repeal.

A proposal to legalize pari mutuel betting on horse races and nine other state issues, including taxation and unemployment relief, are additional incentives for the heavy vote which officials predict. More than 2,500,000 persons are eligible to cast ballots.

Smith Presides At Repeal Meet

ALBANY, June 27.—(INS.)—With former Gov. Alfred E. Smith, pioneer foe of prohibition, directing the procedure, New York state today officially will ratify repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment.

Be Sure Your Beer Tax Is Paid, or Else Beware

HARRISBURG June 27.—(INS.)—Purchasers of beer that does not contain the state tax stamp are liable to prosecution.

A caution for purchasers to beware of unstamped beverage containers came yesterday from Leon D. Metzger, secretary of revenue. He said:

"The individual who buys untaxed beer or wine is just as guilty as the manufacturer or retailer who sells it. The state beverage law makes it unlawful to accept delivery of taxable beverages in containers upon which the official stamp or crown does not appear."

Presbytery Account Short, Banker Held

KITTANNING, Pa., June 27.—Paul L. McKendrick, former cashier of the Merchants National Bank, appeared voluntarily today before Justice of the Peace Atkins to answer an information charging froudulent conversion made by J. E. Giffen, Plumville, representing the Kittanning Presbytery of the Presbyterian Church.

McKendrick was treasurer of the Presbytery moderators' fund from which $7,099 is said to be missing. McKendrick gave bail for court.

GRILL POWER POLITICIAN

WASHINGTON, June 27. —(AP.)—J. Henry Roraback, chairman of the Connecticut Republican state central committee and power company executive, testified at a Federal Trade Commission hearing today that his political position "gave some political influence" when he sought charters for his companies from the Connecticut State Legislature.

Roraback, president of the Connecticut Light and Power Company, and subsidiary companies controlling, he said, more than half the power in the state, was called to the stand in the commission's investigation of subsidiaries of the United Gas Improvement Company.

Robert E. Healy, commission counsel, questioned Roraback at length regarding his political affiliations and also on power company legislation in the state. The witness was asked, too, about his stock purchases in other power companies and circumstances surrounding the rejection of the nomination of Prof. Richard J. Smith as a member of the Connecticut Public Utilities Commission in 1931.

HITLER NEARING SPLIT WITH VATICAN

Arrest of Catholic Party Members Causes Unrest

By KARL H. VON WIEGAND
Universal Service.

LONDON, June 27.—A great wave of unrest, uneasiness and grave concern over Germany's internal situation is sweeping the Reich, according to private information from Berlin, because of wholesale arrests in the last 24 hours of Deputies of the Catholic Bavarian Peoples Party.

Arrests and in some cases mistreatment of Catholic priests in the Rhineland and the Palatinate are reported.

These arrests, it is feared, have destroyed the concordat between Germany and the Vatican which Hitler, following Premier Mussolini's example, had agreed upon in principle with Pope Pius XI.

NEGOTIATIONS END

All negotiations today are reported to have been abruptly broken off. Vice Chancellor Von Papen, who was to have worked out the details with the Vatican, left for Rome last night, according to his friends, with a heavy heart.

Von Papen fears everything he stands for will be swept away, and the incredible statement is made by his friends that the vice chancellor fears his own office may be raided while he is absent.

Meanwhile, the storm of protest continues in Protestant German church circles over forceful intervention in church affairs.

Grounds for the arrests, which totaled 600 or more members of various political parties, are alleged to be secret plans discovered linking the Bavarian People party and Catholics of the Palatinate in a plot to separate South Germany from Prussia.

HITLER'S REPLY

In answer to a telegram this correspondent sent Chancellor Hitler calling attention to the growing impression abroad that the Nazi party is moving toward a form of Bolshevism, I received the following reply:

"The Reich's Chancellor instructs me to say that protection of private property and cultivation of private initiative has always been one of the cardinal points in the National Socialist economic program, and this will be maintained.

"As counter service for this protection, the national government expects a spirit of sacrifice and intensified communal consciousness of all the possessing classes."

The reply was signed by Dr. Lammers, Secretary of State in Hitler's chancellory staff.

JUDGE TO RULE ON MELLON'S 'MALICE' PLEA

Motion to Void Huge Damage Claim May Be Decided Today

WASHINGTON, June 27.—(AP.)—A District of Columbia judge today had under advisement a motion for dismissal of the $220,000,000 suit against Andrew W. Mellon and other former Treasury officials which charged they helped foreign steamship companies defraud the government of income taxes.

In reserving decision on the motion for dismissal, Justice James M. Proctor, of the District of Columbia Supreme Court, indicated he might give his ruling today.

The suit was filed by David A. Olson, a former investigator for the Senate committee investigating banking and the stock market. He also named Ogden L. Mills, another former Treasury secretary; Arthur A. Ballantine, one-time under-secretary; Alexander W. Gregg, Treasury solicitor during the Hoover administration, and David H. Blair, former Internal Revenue collector.

MALICE CHARGED

J. Harry Covington, defense attorney, claimed Olson's complaint was founded upon malice and was so fanciful it had no place in court.

He asserted the complaint was based on a statute passed during the Civil War which makes a federal official liable for double the amount of damages to the government.

Olson claimed that not only did Mellon and other officials fail to collect $100,000,000 due from the unnamed foreign steamship companies, but placed the government in a position where it was compelled to refund $10,000,000.

ACTION DEFENDED

Charles A. Russell, Olson's counsel and former counsel for the Federal Power Commission, argued that the suit had a basis both in law and in fact. He cited the former investigator's contention that the companies were wrongfully permitted to make amended tax returns based on the revenue act of 1921. The suit alleges taxes should have been paid under the 1916, 1917 and 1918 tax laws.

Should Olson win the suit, the Treasury might award him up to 10 per cent of the total amount involved, though such a payment is not mandatory. He filed the complaint in the name of the people of the United States.

PARK BUS PLEA IN HARRISBURG

Continuing their fight for lower bus fares to and from the county parks, County Commissioners C. C. McGovern and C. M. Barr were in Harrisburg today to meet members of the Public Service Commission. They were accompanied by Assistant County Solicitor Mortimer B. Lesher.

The Commissioners are seeking the right to operate buses in competition with the Pittsburgh Motor Coach Company. Lesher has conferred several times recently with independent bus operators.

The Commissioners intended today to seek a certificate of public convenience permitting them to contract with the independent operators for service from downtown Pittsburgh to the parks. If this was refused they planned to ask the right to run the buses from the end of carlines nearest the parks.

Chained in Fire

PAUL BARBER

MOTHER TRAILS SON'S ATTACKER

UNIONTOWN, Pa., June 27.—Mrs. Pearl Barber, mother of Paul Barber, 11, of Luzerne Township, has been leading the posse looking for the man who yesterday chained her son to a log and set fire to nearby brush.

Mrs. Barber rushed to rescue the lad after he called for help. She carried with her the family shotgun and would have used it, she said, had she caught a glimpse of the stranger who Paul declared had tied him. She said:

"Too bad he didn't wait another minute or two, and they wouldn't be looking for him now. They'd be picking two charges of buckshot out of his miserable hide."

According to Paul's story, he was "playing Indian" with a younger brother, Milton, when a stranger with a deformed nose called him to the edge of the property, bound him and set fire to the woods. State police and county detectives are investigating.

Jap Naval Landing Protested by Soviet

John D. Rockefeller and his son, who have a home in New York, set a good example buying $700,000 worth of these "baby bonds."

They, and the Chase Bank, in which they are interested, purchased yesterday $1,300,000 of the total $2,000,000 worth of baby bonds sold thus far.

NEW YORK STATE announces important gains in "depression-crippled industries." That is good news. More important, better news is that these gains in business have been accompanied by increases in WAGES.

Restoration of good wages and the spending power that comes with good wages will restore prosperity, and nothing else will.

It is the spending of the "little man" that makes prosperity for the nation and the fortune of the "big man."

KAHN ASSAILS FOREIGN BOND 'SPREE'

Banker on Stand Hits 'Cut-Throat' Tactics

In 1927, 1928 and 1929 Kuhn, Loeb had no federal securities. Then in 1930, when the storm broke, it acquired holdings of $9,146,956. A year later, in 1931, its investments in Uncle Sam's bonds totaled $24,919,859.12—or just $3,669,859.12 more than the entire capital of the great international firm.

ASSETS FALL

This was the period in which assets of the firm fell from $12[illegible],402,103.78 to $66,974,845.46. It was a terrific loss in assets, but Kuhn, Loeb kept the loss from being greater by buying up United States government securities.

The firm had turned from Europe to South America, from railroads and corporations to the government of the United States to find a safe place for its funds.

This story was revealed with Kahn on the witness stand. He discussed frankly the ethics of the banking profession. He denounced "cut-throat" competitors and assailed bankers who would bid for the right to issue securities.

He rather favored government supervision of private bankers—but called that subject a "closed book," since enactment of the Glass-Steagall bill.

OVER-RICH OUT, PINCHOT SAYS

NEWARK, N. J., June 27.—(AP.)—Gov. Pinchot says that under the "new deal" of the Roosevelt administration, "the over-rich who have been running this country have been dealt out and the common people have been dealt in."

He pointed to the Senate investigation of J. P. Morgan & Co. as an accomplishment of the Roosevelt administration, asserting it showed the public "who was running this country in the days preceding and during the depression and how they managed to do it."

The Governor also referred to Justices John W. Kephart and William I. Schaffer, of the Pennsylvania Supreme Court, and Judge Thomas J. Baldridge, of the Superior Court, whose names the committee found on a list of persons buying stock from the Morgan firm at below market prices. He said:

"The acceptance of such favors by judges sitting on the bench was altogether abominable. I demand the resignations of these judges. They admitted accepting the Morgan favors anw professed to see nothing wrong about it. The only phrase I can think of to describe them is 'naked and unashamed.'"

Senate Ends Probe Of Harriman Case

NEW YORK, June 27.—(INS.)—Its hearing concluded, the United States Senate subcommittee named to fix responsibility for delay in the prosecution of Joseph W. Harriman in connection with failure of the Harriman National Bank and Trust Company today, returned to Washington to begin drafting its formal report.

The one-day hearing was a stormy one, with a narrow escape from physical conflict between Senator Neely, of West Virginia, and former Assistant United States Attorney General Nugent Dodds.

Fog-Bound, Roosevelt Awaits Davis Visit

LAKEMAN BAY, Roque Island, Me., June 27.—(AP.)—Fog-bound for the second day in succession, President Roosevelt loafed about the Amberjack II today as he awaited a visit from Norman H. Davis, America's roving ambassador.

A radio message said Davis left Boston last night on the destroyer Bernadou, which was poking her way northward through the fog at about 10 knots. The chief executive was hoping the destroyer would arrive before darkness made it impossible to enter this little harbor.

Davis is expected to give the President a first-hand account of the deliberations of the Geneva Disarmament Conference which he attended as head of the American delegation.

WELCHPOOL, N. B., June 27.—(AP.)—With Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt settled in the Roosevelt summer home on Campo Bello Island, reparations are going forward for the visit of the President on Thursday.

Mrs. Roosevelt arrived yesterday, coming here by car ferry from Lubec, Me. She will supervise arrangements for the arrival of her husband, who is now leisurely cruising up the coast on the Amberjack II.

Both the island and this village are being decorated with flags and bunting in honor of the President. Dr. Murray S. MacLaren, minister of pensions and national health, will be here to represent the Dominion government, and L. P. D. Tilley, prime minister of New Brunswick, will join him in welcoming the President to Canadian territory.

'Twixt Birds, Riot Guns Sleep Flees in Butler

BUTLER, Pa., June 27.—(AP.)—The bird situation is still bad in the 400 block on North McKean street.

Residents called police, complaining that the birds make so much noise with their chittering that sleep is impossible.

Two officers decided the birds are blackbirds and the season doesn't open until August 1.

There seemed nothing to do until someone concluded the birds are sparrows. So the officers blazed away with riot guns.

Residents again called the police station, saying they'd rather hear the birds than the guns.

So the birds are still in the trees chittering the livelong day—and most of the night.

U. S. MAY USE ARMY IN CAMPAIGN AGAINST RACKETS

UNDERWORLD WAR MAPPED BY CUMMINGS

Justice Officials Draft New Laws to Curb Tide of Crime

By ROBERT S. THORNBURGH
International News Service.

WASHINGTON, June 27.—Incited to action by a recent flareup in the crime wave in many sections of the country, Attorney General Cummings today prepared to organize his forces against the underworld army which he said was attacking civilization.

Organization of a national police force, with district headquarters scattered throughout the country, was one of the plans suggested to Cummings. Even a more radical plan was the use of the armed military forces of the country in stamping out the criminal element.

NATIONAL FORCE

A national police force has been suggested on a number of occasions. It was pointed out that Canada has its famous "Northwest Mounted," with an international reputation for efficiency. Cummings said such a force was one of the many approaches to the problem under consideration.

A considerable volume of data has been assembled on the activities of racketeers, gangsters and other criminal gentry. Commings indicated this would be studied during the summer with a view to the introduction of legislation at the January session of Congress.

In Cummings' view the racketeer problem best can be met through the close co-ordination of the federal, state and local authorities. This he hopes to accomplish.

He said:

"But back of that must be an aroused public sentiment that makes a real demand for the eradication of racketeers. Once that demand is sufficiently insistent the state and municipal authorities will be forced to act in an effective and determined way."

DRAFT NEW LAWS

Despite the fact that the government is endeavoring to get away from the general business of policing, leaving that to the states, Cummings said it has become increasingly apparent the states cannot do the job and that federal assistance must be given.

An initial step in this direction must be new statutes which will create new federal criminal offenses. This would entail additional expenditures and a further crowding of the federal penitentiaries unless the prohibition law is repealed.

Cummings indicated that if the drive against gold hoarders, racketeers and income tax dodgers, as well as other more routine activities burdened the department beyond its capacity he would ask the director of the budget for additional funds. The prohibition appropriation for next year was cut to a little over $4,000,000. Repeal of the law would release virtually all of that sum for the gangster drive.

Possible legislation includes making illegal interstate shipment of stolen goods, strict regulation of the manufacture and distribution of machine guns, and certain other weapons, prohibition of extortion and threat in connection with interstate commerce and others.

Racket Probe to Reopen Lindbergh Kidnaping Case

Universal Service.

NEW YORK, June 27.—Reopening of the Lindbergh and other kidnaping cases will be one of the first activities of the racket investigation to be started shortly by a Senate committee, according to Royal S. Copeland, of New York, chairman of the committee.

All data gathered on the Lindbergh case will be placed at the committee's disposal by federal, city and New Jersey authorities.

In an interview Senator Copeland said the committee is intent on determining whether the kidnapings were directed by a national ring.

EMPLOYE BOND PROPOSALS UP

City Council's finance committee today was to discuss an ordinance compelling city storekeepers to be bonded for $5,000.

The committee also was to consider a proposal to increase bonds carried by employees of the Treasurer's office. The present bonds, according to Treasurer H. Raymond Hilliard, were determined several years ago. In a letter to Council he said an expenditure of $1,235 would be necessary to increase them.

Held Captive

RALPH HYMAN, 34

KIDNAPED MAN FREED HERE

Clad only in underwear and socks, a man found wandering about in Moon Township said today that he had been kidnaped by three armed men in Baltimore last Thursday and held captive until yesterday.

He said he was Ralph Hyman, 34, of Baltimore, that the kidnapers had beaten and tortured him to make him tell where he had hidden winnings which they thought he had made at Maryland's race tracks.

They picked him up in downtown Baltimore in an auto and kept him hidden in the back seat until yesterday, when they released him in woods just off the Narrows Run road in Moon Township, he said.

In Baltimore the police knew nothing of Hyman's disappearance. They learned from his wife, Anna, that he had left to look for work. He was described as a house painter.

COLL'S WIDOW HELD IN KILLING

NEW YORK, June 27.—(INS.)—Arrested on robbery charges as the leader of a bandit trio preying on Bronx merchants, Lottie K. Coll, widow of gangland's slain "mad dog," Vincent Coll, today faced a possible indictment naming her in connection with the murder of 22-year-old Betty Schwartz.

The widow of the slain gang leader and two companions, Thomas Pace and Joseph Ventre, were held on first degree murder charges today as District Attorney Samuel Foley, of the Bronx, announced he had cleared up the mystery surrounding Miss Schwartz' death.

According to Foley, Ventre admitted that he, Mrs. Coll and Pace plotted to hold up Isadore Moroh, Bronx jewelry salesman reputed to carry large sums of money and gems on his person.

The saleman turned and fled, according to Ventre, and Pace fired, three shots at him. One of the bullets went wild, striking Miss Schwartz, who was walking with her younger sister, Yetta.

Grounded Liner, 400 Aboard, Refloated

NEW YORK, June 27.—(Universal.)—The Italian liner Roma, which went aground yesterday during a heavy fog on Sandy Hook Bar just inside the entrance to Ambrose Channel, was refloated at high tide last night. The ship, carrying more than 400 passengers, proceeded to quarantine undamaged, and will dock today.

GANG THROWS RIDE VICTIM ON TRACK

Brutally Beaten Man Rolls Off Rails As Death Nears

Racket killers today apparently had laid aside their bombs and sawed-off shotguns in the East End in favor of the method of taking their enemies for the last ride.

They beat their victim unconscious, stripped him of most of his clothes and left him near death on the railroad tracks at Brilliant Cutoff, opposite Highland Park.

ROLLS OFF RAILS

But their luck was against them. Instead of meeting mangled death beyond identification beneath the wheels of a locomotive, the victim rolled a few feet off the tracks—and there he was found by the crew of a Pennsylvania Railroad shifting engine.

Conveyed to the Pittsburgh Hospital by police, he was too weak to tell his name or the identity of the would-be killers.

He was clad only in underclothes and oversized shoes. He had been stripped of his clothes apparently to remove clues to his identity.

AUTO LEAVES TRACES

Besides the tracks were the prints of auto tires, apparently made by the assailants.

The victim appeared about 45 and an Italian. Five feet six inches tall, he weighs about 165.

This was the first attack to bear the signs of a racket job since the recent series of East Liberty bombings which inspired Mayor Herron to insist that city sleuths find the perpetrators.

Union Drive Begins To Win Tire Men

AKRON, O., June 27.—(AP.)—While executives of Akron's huge rubber manufacturing companies maintained silence, the American Federation of Labor today opened a campaign to unionize the city's thousands of tire builders.

Acting on instructions from the Washington headquarters of the A. F. of L., the Summit County Central Labor Union issued a call for a mass meeting of rubber workers Friday.

Plane Forced Down, 9 Go on by Train

HARRISBURG, June 27.—(INS.)—Nine airplane passengers en route to New York were transferred to a Pennsylvania Railroad train today after a National Air Transport ship, forced off its course, landed at the Harrisburg Airport and became fogbound.

Storms between here and Cleveland forced the pilot to veer south and he decided to make an emergency landing.

Disarm Conference Decides to Adjourn

GENEVA, June 27.—(INS.)—Decision was reached today to adjourn the World Disarmament Conference for the summer.

In a special session, the steering committee decided to convoke the general commission on Thursday and then adjourn it until fall. In the meantime, Chairman Arthur Henderson will attempt to keep the conference alive through private conversations.

HOLLYWOOD, June 27.—(INS.)—If the condition of Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., film actor, in a New York hospital with pneumonia, becomes worse, his former wife, Joan Crawford, glamorous film star, will fly to his bedside. She said:

"It isn't a question of reconciliation. That is finished. I have made up my mind to that. "I will go to him if necessary just like I would go to any friend who has been near and dear to me."

Miss Crawford talked over the telephone with young Fairbanks' mother, Mrs. Jack Whiting, last night, and was advised that the actor's temperature had gone up and that he was complaining of a severe chest pain.

NEW YORK, June 27.—(INS.)—Still seriously ill from lobar pneumonia, Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., today was reported "making a very satisfactory fight" against the disease at Doctors' Hospital, where he has been confined since last Saturday. Fairbanks' physician said:

"His condition is good, but he is still seriously ill. A crisis will not be reached for several days. In these cases is usually takes from seven to nine days to reach the crisis."

Mrs. Jack Whiting, mother of the stricken screen star, also said her son was still in serious condition.

Mrs. Whiting added she was still keeping in close touch with Joan Crawford, young Fairbanks' recently divorced wife, in Hollywood and that Miss Crawford was ready to hurry to her former husband's bedside should his condition become critical.

MEXICO HONORS DEAD FLIERS

MEXICO, D. F., June 27.—(AP.)—Military aviators in Southeast Mexico were ordered today to fly to Minatitlan to form a convoy for the bodies of two Spanish trans-Atlantic fliers who crashed last week en route from Havana to Mexico.

Capt. Mariano Barberan and Lieut. Joaquin Collar were found dead in the wreckage of their plane in a lagoon in the state of Tabasco.

Plans were to bring the bodies to this saddened capital in a large plane chartered by the Spanish embassy, just one week after more than 60,000 persons gathered at Balbuena Field hoping to welcome the good-will aviators.

HEIRESS, ACTOR TO HUNT GOLD

PHILADELPHIA, June 27.—(AP.)—Alexander Gray, screen and stage actor, who married the 19-year-old oil heiress, Peggy Jane McCray, of Tulsa, Okla., on June 14, is taking his bride on a gold prospecting trip soon.

Gray, who is 38, and his bride are visiting his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Alexander P. Gray, here. He said they are planning later in the summer "to rough it in Canada on my 200-acre gold claim."

The idea of prospecting for gold seemed to amuse the bride.

She said:

"I've always loved an outdoor life, and I think it will be lots of fun to see if we can find gold."

Gray said his "Canadian claim" was in Northern Quebec province.

He said:

"All around my claim gold is being discovered, and I am anxious to see what I can find for myself."

PITTSBURGHER REDISCOVERS LOST ART

Hailed as Finder of Medieval Stained Glass Secret

Art's long road has finally led to fame for a former Pittsburgher, acclaimed as the discoverer of the secret of making stained glass windows having the rich colors of the medieval masters.

He is Lawrence Saint, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Saint, of 318 Lehigh avenue, now a resident of Huntingdon Valley, near Philadelphia.

CATHEDRAL WINDOW

A letter from the father today told of an exhibition in the son's studio of the Moses window which is to be placed in the great Washington Cathedral, Mt. St. Albans, Washington.

The younger Saint and his fellow craftsmen have built all the windows for the cathedral, using formulas obtained by the artist in years of searching through the famous cathedrals of Europe.

In studying the windows at close range he frequently risked his life by climbing to eminences for a better view. Samples of glass were chemically analyzed.

STUDIED HERE

Through chemical tests and other means Saint finally achieved his ambition—the discovery of a lost art.

Saint began his career with J. Horace Rudy, art-glass maker, of Pittsburgh. Later at the Pennsylvania Academy of Fine Arts he was granted a traveling scholarship to Europe. Many of his water color sketches of windows of ancient cathedrals are in the Carnegie galleries.

GIRLS IN BOYS' GARB ARRESTED

Three Uniontown girls, in male attire, who came to Pittsburgh to see the sights didn't see much except the police station.

They were gathered in by Policewoman Ida Rickenbrode as they were strolling in Water street near Central station, shortly after their arrival early today.

They are Mary Whogner, 19; Mary Burley, 18, and Mary Groff, 17. They told Magistrate T. D. Jones in Morals Court a friend of the Burley family had brought them here in his truck and was to take them back later today.

The three denied being runaways. They were turned over to social workers to be sent back home. All were wearing trousers belonging to their brothers, they said.

SISTERS FINED IN CUTTING

Two sisters were fined in Morals Court today after an attempt to escape the clutches of employes in a downtown 5 and 10-cent store where they were accused of shoplifting yesterday.

They denied they had stolen anything.

Anna Walters, 22, and her sister, Florence, 16, of 166 Forty-first street, were fined $15 or 15 days in jail. They were accused of slashing two girl clerks who pursued them.

Anna was alleged to have snatched a butcher knife from a lunch counter and slashed Justine Hubert, 19, of 1215 Arnold street, Elliott, and Mildred Bish, 20, of Craig street, on the arms. They were treated by a physician.

YOUNG ELOPERS FOILED BY 'DAD'

An elopment of an 18-year-old girl and a 17-year-old boy went awry today when the boy's father in Cleveland refused to send them money for a marriage license.

Joseph Meruda, 3269 West Thirty-first street, Cleveland, and Marie Sabol, 3228 West Thirtieth street, Cleveland, were held at McKeesport Police Station pending further word from the boy's father, Albert Meruda.

Alderman James J. Lundie told Police Chief John J. Whalen, of McKeesport, the couple appeared at his office yesterday for a marriage license. They had only $2, he said, and told him they would be back today when they had more money.

In the meantime, police said, the boy telegraphed his father and the latter notified the police to apprehend them. The elder Meruda said his son took the family automobile, the police said.

DEATH SUSPECT FIRM IN DENIAL

John Davis, 62, Negro, was back in a cell in Central Police Station today after being questioned by District Attorney Andrew T. Park and Public Safety Director Harmar D. Denny, Jr., in connection with the murder, April 1, of Hilda Lindberg, 42-year-old domestic.

Throughout a grilling in Park's office yesterday Davis maintained his innocence and declared he could prove an alibi. Davis' arrest resulted from the finding of a note in the sleeve of the victim's coat. It read:

"If anything happens to me tonight I am going to see J. D."

Beneath the note was a number in the Highland district which detectives said they had established as that of Davis' telephone.

Beechview Priest Made Bishop of Montana

The Rev. Father Ralph L. Hayes, pastor of St. Catherine's Roman Catholic Church, Broadway, Beechview, has been appointed bishop at Helena, Mont., advices from Rome told the National Welfare Conference in Washington today.

Father Hayes is a native Pittsburgher. He was born in 1884, educated at Duquesne University and at the North American College in Rome, and was ordained in 1909.

He will succeed Bishop Finnegan, whose death occurred last August.

His first appointment was to the assistant pastorate at Holy Rosary Church. He was later diocesan mission apostolate here from 1913 until 1917 when he became superintendent of parochial schools.

He remained at the head of the schools until he went to St. Catherine's in 1925.

Aimee Recovering, May Phone Dave From Paris

PARIS, June 27.—(INS.)—Marked improvement in the condition of Mrs. Aimee MacPherson Hutton, noted American evangelist, was shown today, her physician, Dr. Charles Bove, told International News Service.

Still declining to reveal the nature of the operation performed upon Mrs. Hutton, Dr. Bove said:

"I took out many stitches this morning."

"Mrs. Hutton is high-strung, a nervous temperamental woman, but she is holding herself together well. It has been my experience that a woman such as she is a better patient than the calm type.

"She is not worried, and she has not said anything about dying, although she knew she was gravely and very dangerously ill.

"She is improved now, however. Today for the first time she has eaten soft foods instead of liquids, and seh has started to read newspapers. But she has been too weak to discuss anything or show any interest in things."

It was learned Mrs. Hutton has been inquiring about telephoning to her husband in Los Angeles.

TEXTILE CODE AIMS TO END CHILD LABOR

an interview at recess, said he opposed the 40-hour work week schedule and the minimum wages provided.

JOHNSON APPLAUDED

Hugh S. Johnson, dynamic administrator of the law, was applauded at the opening when he hailed the hearing as of historical significance.

In response to a question from Johnson, Sloan said the idea was that by fixing a minimum wage that would be paid it would be uneconomic for employers to hire children in their plants when they could obtain older employes for the same pay.

Johnson said that "if such were the fact there should be no objection to a provision that would wipe the question out."

MAKES APPEAL

He was dressed in a loose-fitting light summer suit. Abandoning for the moment his usually dynamic delivery, he opened his address in a quiet tone appealing for co-operation for the benefit of all.

As the hearing moved toward a late start, Secretary Perkins, of the Labor Department, shook hands with many industrialists and labor leaders.

Johnson began by explaining the policies and purposes of the administration of the law, saying "we have here a great industry with management and labor joining hands to pull the country out of the difficulties it has been in for the last few years."

RULES LAID DOWN

Ending quickly his quietly spoken extemporaneous remarks, Johnson presented Donald R. Richberg, general counsel for the administration, who outlined the procedure to be followed.

Following Richberg, Sloan led off for the textile code by reading it slowly to show that under it one of America's greatest industries offered under government supervision to fix a minimum wage for unskilled employes—except apprentices and outside workers—of $10 per week in the South and $11 in the North, the difference being based upon higher living costs in the North.

The code also stipulates that no employe would be worked more than 40 hours a week and that productive machinery would not operate more than two shifts of 40 hours each per week.

As required by the law, the employes were guaranteed the right to organize and bargain collectively through representatives of their own choosing and be free from interference, restraint, or coercion of employers of labor.

Sloan pointed out that the industry was highly competitive with many units and many small mills.

WAGES EXPLAINED

What the minimum wage would mean to workers in the North was presented by Robert Amory, of Boston, a leader in the cotton manufacturing industry, who said that the minimum $11 in that section would most largely affect light jobs not easily handled by grown men, heads of families. He estimated the average weekly wage would be in the neighborhood of $15, and the average hourly wage almost three times as much as was paid in 1909-1914 and about 27 per cent more than the average hourly rate in 1926. Amory said:

"It must be clearly kept in mind that a minimum wage is a minimum wage, not a standard wage.

"The minimum wage must be paid regardless of the ability of the worked. * * * The minimum wages proposed, so far as the North is concerned, would not change the present weekly wages of the better paid mills, but would make for many less hours in which to earn this wage and would permit the carrying of many additional workers."

He condemned operation of three shifts with consequent midnight work in the industry as an "anti-social practice."

Amory said he knew of no instances where heads of families would be expected to work at $11 minimum wage in the North.

DISCORD AIRED

First indication of discord remaining in the industry appeared when William D. Anderson, of Macon, Ga., protested that certain manufacturers of tire fabric and other cotton fabric goods were seeking to have their own mills exempted from the code. He said:

"I maintain that every spindle should be treated alike—that all should get a dose out of the same bottle."

MINE WORKERS ADD 150,000

INDIANAPOLIS, June 27.—(AP.)—Approximately 150,000 persons have been added during the last four weeks to the membership of the United Mine Workers of America.

Ellis Searles, editor of the union's official publication, said today that protection provided in the industrial recovery act against certain types of interference in the form of court injunctions is responsible in great measure for the increase.

Total membership of the union now approximates 650,000, Searles said.

Although the membership drive, instituted by John L. Lewis, international president of the union, has been international in scope, Searles said, efforts have been directed principally toward those areas in which injunctions had prevented the union from organizing miners and in some cases from holding meetings.

This has been the case largely in three states, Virginia, West Virginia and Pennsylvania, Searles said.

STATE LEADERS TO SCAN CODES

HARRISBURG, June 27.—(AP.)—Asserting its long-term effects are so great as to "usher in an economic revolution," Alba B. Johnson, president of the state Chamber of Commerce, wants Pennsylvania businessmen to meet here July 7 to study the scope of the National Industrial Recovery Act.

Issuing a call for the meeting last night, Johnson told members of the chamber that it goes without saying "business cannot afford to bungle this opportunity to eliminate unfair competitive practices, by government sanction rather than control."

Payrolls Mount Here, New Jobs on Railroads

Employment Shows Increase; Cars In Demand

Payrolls in Pittsburgh's basic industries are mounting, prospects are bright for escaping the usual slump and indications are that railroads here will creat hundreds of new jobs within a few weeks, according to informed observers.

Included in this recovery program is today's blowing in of the third blast furnace at the Edgar Thomson Works of the Carnegie Steel Company at Braddock at 2:30 p. m.

Three hundred men have been called back on a 48-hour-a-week schedule at the repair shops of the Pittsburgh and West Virginia Railroad at Rook. Demand for freight cars that have been in storage necessitated the new schedule which is six days a week compared with 25 hours two months ago.

Payrolls of 283 Western Pennsylvania manufacturing concerns in May were 18 per cent higher than in April, according to Dr. Ralph J. Watkins, head of the bureau of business research at the University of Pittsburgh.

Based on reports from manufacturers, employment during the month increased by 5.1 per cent in non-ferrous metal industries, and 3.6 for all concerns reporting.

Wage earners employed by 177 manufacturers worked 30 hours more in May than in April, Dr. Watkins observed:

"In ordinary cyclical recovery this district, strongly weighed with production of heavy goods, appears to lag somewhat. In May, however, the governmental program to foster price recovery already was being felt, and the plan aimed at restoration of employment through a large-scale construction program was generally recognized as assured of passage."

POTTERS MEET HERE ON CODE

A code for operation of the ceramic industry under the national recovery act was being discussed at a special meeting of the United States Potters' Association in the William Penn Hotel today. The association is composed of all general ware manufacturers in North America.

W. Edwin Wells, of Newell, W. Va., president, said that as soon as a code was decided upon it would be forwarded to federal authorities in Washington.

COAL MEN MEET TO DRAFT CODE

Plans for the completion of a code for the coal industry to be submitted to Gen Hugh S. Johnson, administrator of the industrial recovery act, were being speeded in a series of meetings of executives today.

Leaders of the Coal Control Association of Western Pennsylvania, organization of which was completed under the leadership of the Pittsburgh Coal Company yesterday, were called to a meeting at the office of J. D. A. Morrow, president of Pittsburgh Coal, today. At this conference they were to discuss the problem of a code with representatives of producers in Ohio and Northern West Virginia.

POLICY MEETING

Another meeting of leaders of the Coal Producers' Association of Western Pennsylvania was called at the office of B. H. Cannon, of the Fort Pitt Coal Company, secretary of the organization, to formulate policies to be followed in relationships with the Coal Control Association.

At the organization meeting of the Coal Control Association yesterday, Morrow was elected chairman, W. W. Keefer, president of Pittsburgh Terminal Coal, was elected vice chairman and E. R. Glass secretary.

With representatives of both Pittsburgh Coal and Pittsburgh Terminal Coal at its head, the new association represents the extremes in the attitude of producers of this district on the labor question. Pittsburgh Coal is bitterly opposed to the United Mine Workers of America, is working on an open shop basis and is attempting to avoid unionization of its mines through the formation of company unions. Pittsburgh Terminal Coal is working under an agreement with the United Mine Workers. In spite of the similarity of names, the two companies have no connection with each other.

CODE COMMITTEE

At the organization meeting of the Coal Control Association yesterday, a committee was named to draw up a code. The members of this committee are E. B. Leisenring, president of the Westmoreland Coal Company; Scott Stewart, president of the W. J. Rainey Coal Company, and George H. Love, vice-president of Union Collieries.

Alternates on the code committee are H. F. Bovard, president of the Keystone Coal and Coke Company; Ralph H. Jamison, president of the Jamison Coal and Coke Company; A. R. Budd, of the Hillman Coal and Coke Company; C. S. B. Ward, president of the Pleasant Valley Coal Company, and John H. Hoffstott, general manager of the Lincoln Gas Coal Company.

The officers of the Coal Control Association also will serve on the code committee.

COUNTY SEEKS SHARE OF U. S. CASH

Determined that Allegheny County shall get its full share of the federal funds included in the direct grant of $300,000,000 to the states under President Roosevelt's industrial recovery program, county officials were in Harrisburg today to confer with the Governor's special public works committee.

E. L. Schmidt, county planning engineer, and Assistant County Solicitor Churchill Mehard left Pittsburgh this morning for the conference.

County Commissioner C. C. McGovern already has sent to Gov. Gifford Pinchot a list of improvements to be included under the public works program. The list includes the extension of the Ohio River and Allegheny River boulevards, extension of the Stoops Ferry-Shoustown road, construction of the Wayman-Baptist road to South Park, and widening of Jerome avenue, McKeesport. The improvements total approximately $17,000,000.

BENEDUM SEES LABOR SCARCITY

WASHINGTON, June 27.—Declaring that he is taking no active interest in politics and that his chief concern is to get the oil business "on its feet," M. L. Benedum, Pittsburgh appointee on the advisory and planning council for the Department of Commerce, was elated when he came from the first session of that body. He said:

"Roosevelt policies are irresistible. All business men, Democrats and Republicans alike, are rallying to the President's standard in the fight against depression. Let me make the prophecy that a year from now we will be out looking for labor instead of fleeing from the specter of unemployment."

Pittsburgh Coal Men Fight Rate Raise

Pittsburgh district coal shippers today were fighting before the Interstate Commerce Commission to retain present rail rates on shipments by river and rail to Ohio points.

Twelve railroads are seeking to boost the rates from river ports to Youngstown, Cleveland and intermediate Ohio markets. The carriers ask a 50-cent per ton increase on coal shipments transference from river barges at Conway and Colona, Pa.

Jobholders Ask Wage Slashes Be Restored

GREENSBURG, Pa., June 27.—Prosperity is coming back and two county officers want to share in it. They have notified the County Controller, G. A. McDowell, that effective July 1, they want restored the 10 per cent salary cut which they voluntarily accepted last January.

Mrs. Emma E. Mowry, of Derry, Recorder of Deeds, and Deputy Recorder J. Ross Foust, of Greensburg, today served notice on the Controller. Mrs. Mowry was cut from $416.66 to $375 monthly and Foust from $250 to $225.

Textile Workers Remain on Strike

READING, Pa., June 27.—(INS.)—Striking hosiery mill workers who defied their employers by remaining out on strike today held their lines intact awaiting further action of the operators who had threatened to hire new workers as replacements.

Officials of the nine mills affected said about 1,500 workers had walked out but union leaders placed the figure at more than 2,500.

HEIRESS HEADS BUYERS' BOARD

WASHINGTON, June 27.—(AP.)—Mrs. Mary Rumsey, of New York City, yesterday was named chairman of the Consumers' Advisory Board to represent the buying public in the administration of the National Recovery Act.

NEW YORK, June 27.—(AP.)—Mrs. Mary Rumsey, named as chairman of the Consumers' Advisory Board, is the widow of Charles Cary Rumsey, sculptor and international polo player, and the second daughter of the late E. H. Harriman, railroad magnate.

At the time of her father's death she was reported to have inherited approximately $25,000,000 from his estate.

She was married in 1910 to Rumsey, who had been widely recognized in the art world. He was killed in an automobile accident in 1922.

Mrs. Rumsey has long been interested in charitable activities. Several years ago she purchased an old ferryboat and converted it into a sanitarium for consumptive children among the city's poor.

WIFE, SUITOR DIE IN PACT

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., June 27.—(INS.)—Rather than abandon their friendship, a married waitress and an unemployed man, both of Philadelphia, ended their lives with poison in a suicide pact, police said today after an investigation.

Several hours after their bodies were discovered by a small boy, who crawled under a tent platform to retrieve a ball, the victims were identified as Mrs. Joseph Freitas, 26, and George Motz, 32.

Authorities said the couple evidently crawled beneath a hospital station on the beach late Saturday night or early Sunday morning and drank the poison which they had brought with them from Philadelphia.

GIMBELS—A MILLION DOLLARS IN JUNE

INTEREST HIGH IN $1.50 MENUS CONTEST

Hundreds of housewives throughout the reading area of the Sun-Telegraph are more than excited about the Prudence Penny Prize Dinner Menu Contest now running in this newspaper, in which $100 in weekly cash prizes is being awarded to women who submit the best menus for an appetizing dinner for four persons at a cost not to exceed $1.50.

The publication of the prize-winning menus for the first week has spurred their interest in this unique and timely contest, and vividly brought home the fact that careful, prudent shopping is one of the prize necessities of today.

This contest, above all other things, is solving the problem of furnishing balanced and appetizing dinners daily to the average family. This is, of course, aided by the fact that foodstuffs, although rising slightly in price, are still lower than they have been for several years.

GOOD MEALS PROVIDED

Housewives are finding that by familiarizing themselves with these prices and by careful shopping it is really possible to place a fine dinner on the table for four persons at the price mentioned. Food prices today also offer an opportunity for an almost numberless variety of menus.

Entries in Contest No. 2 must be submitted before midnight tonight. Entries for Contest No. 3 must be in before midnight next Monday night. There is no limit to the number of menus that may be submitted by one person and prize-winners are not barred from winning a second award.

BLANKS, RULES GIVEN

There is an entry blank and a set of rules on another page of today's Sun-Telegraph. Additional entry blanks may be had for the asking at any one of these stores: Triangle, Clover Farms, Kroger's, Butler's, Donahoe's and McCann's.

MORE PRIZE-WINNERS

EMPLOYES AID TURK AT TRIAL

CLEVELAND, June 27.—(AP.)—Five defense witnesses testified yesterday in the arson murder trial of Ray I. Turk that there was "nothing unusual" about his barber and beauty supply shop on the day before the Ellington Apartments fire, in which 12 persons burned to death.

The state charges that Turk arranged with an arson gang to set fire to the shop, which was located in the Ellington Building, so that insurance might be collected.

Four of the defense witnesses were formerly Turk's employes and the fifth was Gustav Marchant, who said he took a pair of barbers' scissors to the shop for sharpening on June 6, 1932, the day before the fire.

Dr. Wilson Chamberlain, assistant Coroner, testified today that 12 persons lost their lives when the apartments were burned. Previously it had been believed that 13 were killed.

MOTHER OF 4 SHOT, MAN HELD

EASTON, Pa., June 27.—(AP.)—Police are holding Edward Linden, a 37-year-old widower and sheet metal worker, while they investigate the death of Mrs. Janet Cosper, 40, whose body, with a bullet hole through the head, was found at a rooming house today.

Linden admitted, authorities said, that he met the woman at the rooming house, where they had had previous rendezvous.

Police said Linden told conflicting stories that Mrs. Cosper, married and the mother of four children, had committed suicide and also that the revolver was discharged in a struggle for possession of it as she was about to end her life.

A search of Linden's room in another part of the city revealed a note, police said, which indicated that he had intended to kill Mrs. Cosper and then end his life.

RAIL OFFICIAL DIES BY SHOT

READING, Pa., June 27.—(AP.)—A bullet through the head caused the death of R. Boone Abbott, 52, assistant general superintendent of the Reading Company, two days after announcement of his transfer to a new post.

His body was found in his home last night after he twice had failed to keep an appointment with Isaac T. Tyson, whom he was to relieve as superintendent of the Reading division. Tyson, a close friend, made the discovery with several others.

A pistol lay near the body and authorities say Abbott had been dead since Sunday morning. He had been living alone in the absence of his mother and an aunt, both of whom were at Atlantic City.

Abbott, a nephew of the late Agnew T. Dice, former president of the Reading, had been with the company 34 years.

POEMS IN PEN FREE GIRL

PHILADELPHIA, June 27.—(INS.)—Poetry written within prison walls that expressed remorse for a misguided life and love for her foster parents today won clemency for Mrs. Patricia J. Lyons, 24-year-old mother of two children, one of whom was born in prison.

"There seems to be some good in this girl yet."

So said Federal Judge George A. Welsh after he read a sheaf of poems handed up to him by counsel for Mrs. Lyons, serving a five-year term for forgery at the State Industrial Home for Women at Muncy. He added:

"She shows intelligence and education and I believe she may mend her ways."

Judge Welsh gave the young mother a 60-day suspended sentence and placed her on probation for five years after she pleaded guilty to defrauding the government of more than $1,200 by "raising" the amounts on money orders she had purchased.

MRS. PINCHOT HITS LOW PAY

PHILADELPHIA, June 27.—(AP.)—Leaders who insist "that workers shall have no voice" in industry, are blamed by Mrs. Gifford Pinchot, wife of the Governor, for "the fact that millions of persons in Pennsylvania today are working for a wage that is nothing but a farce."

Urging workers to take every advantage of President's Roosevelt's industrial control act, she told a joint board of the dyeing industry in this district last night, which went on record in favor of a state investigation of the industry, that "real prosperity will return only under a new regime which will allow all to partake of its benefits in some measure."

She declared the prosperity to which "these so-called business leaders would have us return is the old, one-sided prosperity in which millions have no share."

Island in Pacific Goes AWOL, Japs In Pursuit

TOKIO, June 27.—(AP.)—Ganges Island, shown on maps of the Pacific Ocean at 30.57 degrees north latitude, 154.10 degrees east longitude, has disappeared, according to Japanese naval surveyors who have just completed an extensive hydrographic cruise.

They reported a thorough survey was made of the Megallan Archipelago without a trace of the island being found.

The Megallan Archipelago, which includes Ganges Island, extends from the southern Japanese coast about half way to Hawaii. The Times Atlas says the numerous islands are mostly uninhabited and Longman's Gazeteer says they are all uninhabited.

3 SLUG AUTOIST, STEAL CAR

Slugged by three men, who stopped his automobile in Twentieth street, South Side, Howard McKenna, 2369 Eighteenth street extension, was robbed of his automobile and watch early today, he reported to police.

One of the men leaped on the running board of the car as McKenna was driving slowly near Wharton street, and said:

"You're the fellow we want."

The others appeared, and McKenna was struck on the head and taken from the machine. He walked home and Dr. C. E. Kylander was called to close a wound on McKenna's head.

The automobile was recovered later near the scene of the holdup. A spare tire was missing.

Box Car Victim's Body Arrives Home

CHARLEROI, Pa., June 27.—(INS.)—The body of Eugene Jossen, 20, Charleroi hitch-hiker found dead in a freight car in Big Springs, Tex., arrived here today for funeral services.

Arrangement for the funeral was made by Robert Jossen, 30, a brother, who has been investigating his theory that Eugene was slain in or near Wheeling, W. Va., and his body stuffed into the freight car.

DROUGHT HITS U. S. CROPS

International News Service.

Heavy crop losses continued today as the entire Middle West blistered under a sweltering sun and a serious drought threatened grain products.

Iowa was most seriously attacked by the persistent lack of rain and by soaring temperatures. The rain deficiency already has caused a 50 per cent loss in small grains and dangerous damage to the corn crop.

Seventeen heat deaths were reported in Iowa during the past four days. State officials today asked the aid of conservation corps in a vigorous effort to halt the onward march of insect pests.

While the mercury in Iowa soared to 104 degrees in some places, Illinois, Indiana and Ohio, too, were feeling the wrath of the scorching sun. In Chicago, the mercury had reached 90 before noon. Indianapolis reported 85 degrees at 9 a. m. with rising temperatures and one death from excessive heat.

Corn, sugar and beet crops in Ohio were spotted as the mercury approached 90 degrees at noon. Missouri's wheat crop was in danger as the drought continued and the thermometer continued its merciless climb.

In Denver, the mercury shot up to 94 degrees, the highest of the season. It was 100 at Roswell, N. M.; 88 at Cheyenne, Wyo., and 94 at Salt Lake City.

SUGAR RATION PLAN ASSAILED

WASHINGTON, June 27.—(INS.)—A bombshell was dropped into the sugar conference here today when Chester H. Gray, spokesman for the American Farm Bureau Federation, assailed proposals to limit production of American sugar to stabilize world sugar production.

Instead of bringing world producers into a plan to allocate the American market, the Farm Relief Administration, he said, should proceed to help American producers get a better price.

$50,000 SEIZURE OF DOPE HINTS BIG EXPOSE

By WINIFRED BLACK

SAN FRANCISCO, June 27. — Fifty thousand dollars worth of shame, humiliation, degradation, agony and death — found right here in San Francisco, by the federal narcotic officers.

Fifty thousand dollars worth of "dope" all wrapped up in neat packages and hidden in two suitcases under the water boiler in a plain, respectable looking apartment in a nice, respectable and highly prosperous neighborhood.

That the value of the stuff in the open market of legitimate business—judge it according to street peddlers and it's worth $150,000.

Congratulations, Mr. Anslinger, head of the Narcotic Bureau of Washington, D. C.

You must have some good, wide awake men at work in your federal narcotic department here in California.

Greetings to you, Mr. McPike—you didn't have to wait long to get busy in your job as United States Attorney, did you?

EXPOSE INDICATED

It begins to look as if we were going to find out something practical about the great dope ring, that we all know is circling the globe this very minute, and has been circling it for years.

Oh, yes, we've arrested lots of the little fellows.

We've "picked 'em up," in dark alleys and in fetid rooms in the dirty lodging houses on both sides of the city.

We've "raided" little sly shops, snuggled down in the lee of some of the great buildings on business streets.

Broken hearted mothers who have seen their boys and girls drifting into the cruel clutch of the dope ring have made desperate attempts to find the dastards who were selling death and misery to their poor, foolish children.

The courts have been busy again and again, with dope cases.

Once in a while somebody, somewhere near the higher up, has been caught and delivered to justice, but always in the background there has hovered the sinister shadow of the "big shot," safe and untouched.

"BIG SHOT" CAUGHT

They say he's going to make a full and free confession—it ought to be interesting reading—that confession.

It may touch a few rather important people, and they won't like it at all.

Isn't it just about time that somebody told the plain truth about these well-connected men and women, who are making fortunes out of this traffic in human degradation?

And while you're working at the dope business, Mr. United States Attorney — let's hear some more about those 700 doctors who deal in dope in secret, yes, and take dope themselves in secret, too.

And no wonder—who wants to even think of turning a case of life and death over to a surgeon who may be himself an edict?

They held a solemn dope conference in Geneva not so long ago, and then they all trekked down through the heat and the typhoons to Bangkok and held another conference — the solemn delegates.

MISERY CULTIVATED

But the poppy fields are gay with bloom, and nobody is digging up any of the plants and shrubs from which cocaine is made, although the best medical authorities now assert that there is not one particle of legitimate use for cocaine now that safe and harmless substitutes have been discovered.

The British opium market is as busy as ever and now China is considering a plan to make a government monopoly of the opium trade.

Why not—when they see the British doing exactly the same thing in India and the Straits Settlements.

And America is the dumping ground for more than two-thirds of this deadly poison.

Isn't it just about time that we made a few interesting discoveries. And won't the honorable and deeply respected members of the great profession of medicine make it their business to get rid of the dope doctors, and get rid of them —now.

COURT UPHOLDS P. O. PAY SCALE

Judge Sylvester J. Snee, in an opinion yesterday refused to interfere by injunction with employment of plasterers on the new postoffice building, holding the contract to pay the prevailing rate of wages in the district was valid.

The plaintiffs, H. B. Frazier and other members of a local plasterers' union, asserted in their suit that they were willing to work for less than the union scale of $12 a day, but that the Hachmeister-Lind Company, sub-contractors, had rejected them.

The injunction proceeding was directed against that concern, the Aronberg-Freed Company, general contractors, the Contracting Plasterers' Association of Allegheny County and other labor organizations.

The international association, according to testimony at the hearing, does not recognize Local No. 31, Operative Plasterers and Cement Finishers' International Association, to which the plaintiffs belong.

SCHOOL CODE UPHELD IN W. VA.

CHARLESTON, W. Va., June 27—(AP.)—The constitutionality of the county school unit law was upheld yesterday by Circuit Judge A. P. Hudson.

The jurist denied an injunction sought by a group of Charleston taxpayers to restrain the Charleston independent district school board from turning its records and properties over to the new Kanawha County board on July 1.

They had argued that the law was unconstitutional because, among other things, it abolished all magisterial and independent school districts without a vote of the people.

THRIFT

It is right to be thrifty, these days. But if you are one who is "doing without" your telephone, think again. • The telephone saves more than it costs. Without it, you spend money, time and effort on countless trips the telephone can make more easily. You put friends to unnecessary trouble—sometimes expense—when they want to reach you. • And when emergencies arise—fire or sickness—who knows what it may cost you to be without a telephone in your home?

The nickels you spend because you haven't a telephone may keep one in your home. You can have one for less than 10 cents a day!

ROOSEVELT AID PLEDGED VETS

CINCINNATI, O., June 27.—(AP.)—The assurance of President Roosevelt that "no man who has been handicapped in after life by his service to his country shall be forgotten or unrewarded to the fullest extent that our financial condition permits" was before the convention of the Disabled American Veterans today. The President said in a telegram:

"You may have no fear that anything has been done which will bar any war sufferer from the grateful recognition of his country."

Meanwhile, delegates pushed toward completion of a convention program that was expected to include a demand for restoration of the cuts for service connected disabilities included in Mr. Roosevelt's economy program.

The soldier bonus also was an issue, with leaders urging that no demand for cash payment of adjusted service certificates be made at this time.

URGE RUSSIAN RECOGNITION

MILWAUKEE, Wis., June 27.—(AP.)—The Central Conference of American Rabbis concluded its convention yesterday by adopting a resolution favoring recognition of Soviet Russia by the United States.

Another resolution protested legislation hostile to the Catholic Church in foreign lands in recent years. Although not mentioning any nations by name, the resolution clearly referred to Mexico and Spain.

The vote on the resolution favoring Russian recognition came after spirited battle. Opponents said the rabbis, a religious group, ought not to favor recognition of a government which has shown itself hostile to all religions. The majority contended recognition would help to promote better relations between Russia and the United States.

OPEN SWITCH WRECKS TRAIN

LANCASTER, June 27.—(AP.)—An open switch, from which investigators said the lock had been removed, caused a Pennsylvania Railroad locomotive, tender and two cars to plunge 15 feet off the end of a trestle, injuring four members of the crew.

Toting seven cars along the Pomeroy-Newark freight branch yesterday, the locomotive entered the open switch and ran along the 100-foot trestle siding. It pulled the first two cars over the end.

As a wrecking crew was towing the other five cars off the trestle, the structure collapsed.

BOGUS MONEY SUSPECT HELD

A man in whose possession police reported finding 24 counterfeit $5 bills, was to be turned over to federal authorities today.

The prisoner said he was Hobart Henderson, alias Robert Anderson 34, of Cincinnati. He was arrested last night in Arlington avenue. The alleged bogus money was found when the prisoner was searched at Mt. Washington Police Station. Henderson told police he had been drinking and was unable to explain how he got the spurious bills.

OAKLAND CITY, Ind., June 27.—(AP.)—Three robbers who took $252 from a grocery store here were obliging.

A woman customer entered, not knowing that a holdup was in progress, and ordered some ham. One of the gunmen took her order, sliced the meat and handed it to her—then pocketed the money.

Walter Winchell ON BROADWAY

The Private Papers of W. W.

UNHOLLYWOOD, Cal.—Amazing! . . . I mean about Gus Kahn, listed by his deadliest enemies and competitors as America's No. 1 lyric writer of songs . . . Mr. Kahn, who penned the delicious wordage of Ziegfeld's "Whoopee" show and such classics as "My Buddy," or if you prefer, "Yes, Sir, She's My Baby" and more recently "Sweetheart Darlin'" (the Marion Davies flicker smash), was fired by the business manager of Warner Brothers recently—because, said the man, "He can't write songs!" . . . Space here will not permit even a partial list of the hits created by the expert Gus Kahn . . . The night he was fired some of us were grouped in a parlor listening to Ben Bernie's and some good orchestras, and all we heard were remarks like: "And now, ladies and gentlemen, we will render another of Gus Kahn's grand songs." . . . Three different crews made similar announcements—playing his tunes of the hour . . . And the Warner business manager doesn't consider Kahn able . . . So what happened? So this happened. RKO hired Kahn at $150 per week more!

It is among the pathetic things in Hollywood . . . Observing a one-time star of the Ziegfeld menus and the shadow shows as she tangoes or fox-trots in the Los Angeles places . . . You've read about her a lot recently . . . Her affected manner and overdressing and heavily rouged lips describe her plenty . . . Her head is usually tilted back as though she always anticipated a kiss . . . She is kittenish—and tries to appear girlish—although it has been years since she had that power for which all women tacitly hunger . . . Her movies have broken box-office records everywhere . . . It seems as though it were only yesterday when she had a quarter of a million dollars, which an alleged nobleman helped her squander . . . Only yesterday that swains from the four corners wept for her favors . . . Today you see her in the Cocoanut Grove over-playing a part. Her companions—specially hired gigolos.

The husband of the renowned terpsichore tutor, Albertina Rasch—is Dmitri Tiomkin . . . Albertina's sepia butler fell in love with the wife of Albertina's colored chauffeur . . . They went out one night recently—and the chauffeur followed . . . Some husbands are like that . . . The pash pair used Dmitri's car . . . The trailin and suspecting husband used his own car . . . At Santa Monica and Bedford Drive, Beverly Hills, an accident took place . . . A woman was killed, several injured. The abandoned car was Dmitri's . . . Police swarmed in on him and kept him on the grill at Police Headquarters for nearly three hours . . . Until the happy idea struck someone to call Jo Swerling's home, where he had spent the evening playing cards when the crash happened. As a result the snarl was untangled . . . But not until the innocent Dmitri had learned what it means to be suspected of running away with your chauffeur's wife—and killing a man.

I like to hear Kay Francis talk . . . And stuggle with her R's . . . Thee althoh lithps thlightly . . . The Edmund Lowes have a system. Mrs. Lowe (Lilyan Tashman) spends everything she earns, which is plenty, on gowns and frocks and other doodads. He saves his, which she says is enough to live on . . . As indicated recently—they are after Abe Lyman. His man Friday motoring a girl home the other midnight was interrupted by stick-ups who thought he was Lyman . . . They took the car.

The Darryl Zanuck-Harry Warner quarrel offers his one . . . Zanuck, an expert at polo, had invited Warner (when he was still working for him) out to his home one Sunday to see him play the dangerous but exciting game . . . All Warner would say when the subject of polo came up was: "All I'm interested in is how much money can I make out of such a thing" . . . Zanuck tried to explain polo was merely his relaxation after a trying week . . . "It's silly," countered Warner, "what money can you make from it?" . . . The last hit picture produced for Warner was "The Little Giant," the ending of which is hilariously amusing. It reveals a group of gangsters playing the game and socking each other on the domes with polo mallets . . . After the movie started breaking money records (and Zanuck had split with Warner) he hired him: "Look at your last statements and profits on 'Little Giant'—that, my chump, is how you make money out of polo!"

Edmund Goulding at the M-G-M lot had an eyeful the other day . . . Watching nearly 2,000 ambitious young ladies parade before his orbs in bathing suits . . . They were recruited from cities everywhere for "Dancing Lady," so scarce are good lookers for the chorus here, they say . . . Sam Goldwyn says he can't find the right sirens for E. Cantor's "Roman Scandals," and is sending scouts everywhere for them . . . Huh, I know scores on Broadway, who served Ziegfeld, White and the others who are going hungry! . . . And others in the Broadway revues who are prettier than some I've seen here . . . It is my counsel to the girls at the Hollywood Cafe and the Paradise in New York to send Goldwyn their nicest photos . . . Who can say? They may click. Joan Crawford started as a nobody, as who didn't? . . . The lucky darlings will rate 10-week contracts at $65 per week—and the possibility of being what is known as a "find."

The look of gratefulness on Sidney Blackmer . . . When he encountered a New York correspondent, the only one to feature the fact that he had been exonerated of a trumped up charge by a gal and her mother. The notoriety almost ruined his career, and the favorable verdict was played down . . . George Raft is being bothered again . . . By a fantastic femme, who also tried it on Antonio Moreno—It was proven, however, she never met them. She didn't try the courts, her routine was confined to penning them wild letters telling of her love for them, and that if they didn't visit her—she would commit suicide . . . It must be awful to be famous . . . As Al Green, the director, says, "There's a lotta luck in the world—but there's no luck in holding it."

It was recorded that Maurice Chevalier says he cannot sing or act without his straw hat . . . He wore a cap almost throughout "Love Me Tonight" . . . Charles Farrell was told by his manager to be indifferent to a contract that would have brought him $160,000 . . . He hasn't worked since . . . Rufus Lemaire after an argument with an exec is barred from the Fox lot. He gets his wage of $1,000 by mail weekly, however . . . Philip Merivale, one of the better actors, was hired by the same company a year ago and hasn't done a moment's work—at $1,750 per!

Fox Chapel's Opening Happy

By GEORGE SEIBEL

The other one of Pittsburgh's two summer playhouses had its opening last night in the Shady Side Academy Theater at Fox Chapel, and a merry farce had been selected to insure a happy premiere. "Springtime for Henry" is by Benn W. Levy, the author of "The Devil Passes," and is in his frothiest and most whimsical vein. It kept the fairly numerous audience in good humor and occasionally in high glee. Which must be set down to the credit of the four players who constitute the entire cast—and who had no easy task, for the original New York production, headed by Leslie Banks and Frieda Inescort, was a foursome rarely well balanced.

Mr. Seibel

Donald Gallagher, Gilbert Milton, Polly Rowles and Helen Wayne were the four young people who did the job. And they did it well, especially the ladies. While the pace of the first act was a little uncertain, the last act went with a dash and a bang that showed this group had excellent direction from Arnold S. Berk.

REMEMBER IT'S FARCE

The story of the play may be hard to believe, but we must remember it's farce. This Henry mentioned in the title is a rich idler of uncertain reputation and more uncertain temper. How he acquires a secretary who proceeds to make a decent gentleman out of him, and how the progress of reform is halted by unfortunate revelations and feline femininity—that is the plot of the frothy and frivolous, fast and furious farce.

In the New York production there was a fifth character who appeared only 30 seconds. This is the first secretary, who is fired as the curtain rises, and Mr. Dewlip throws an armful of books and magazines after her as she makes her hurried exit. Perhaps to have retained this opening would have accelerated the tempo and given the farce its first fillip.

A HAPPY QUARTET

The smoothest performance of the happy quartet was that of Helen Wayne as the mild and decent Miss Smith, whose surprising past is the cause of the cold caught by Donald Gallagher as Mr. Dewlip.

Polly Rowles also was in her element as Mrs. Jelliwell, the lady whose life was nearly ruined when Mr. Dewlip tottered on the brink of reform.

Gilbert Milton as her fatuous husband gave a well-accentuated portrayal of the bounder type, and Donald Gallagher as Henry was very amusing, though a bit heavy—Henry should not take himself so seriously. But it was altogether a very enjoyable and well-rounded performance of an airily fantastic frivol, well staged in the gym auditorium of Shady Side at Fox Chapel. It will be repeated every evening this week, with changes in the cast.

New Features Of Screen

"Made on Broadway," featuring Robert Montgomery as the publicity agent who turned Broadway upside down for Sally Eilers, is on the screen today in the Fulton instead of waiting until Thursday.

* * *

* * *

Ramon Novarro plays the part of a Nile guide who falls in love with Myrna Loy, his employer, in "The Barbarian," photoplay opening Friday in the Penn. The story is a comedy romance in the Egyptian desert.

* * *

"Baby Face" starring Barbara Stanwyck as a girl who quits her home town and goes to New York where she gets a job in a big bank and vamps all the officials. George Brent has the leading male role. The picture will be in the Stanley Friday.

* * *

James Cagney and Madge Evans have principal roles in "The Mayor of Hell" opening Friday in the Warner. Cagney plays a wardheeler who finds drama in a reform school.

* * *

"Strictly Personal," with Marjorie Rambeau, Eddie Quillan and Dorothy Jordan, will come to the Davis and Sheridan Square Friday. In it an ex-convict operates a club. Eddie Quillan and Dorothy Jordan supply the romance.

Relief Bond Funds To Improve Streets

Not all the sum will go for street improvements as other public works projects are to be included.

Irene Dunne And Howard To Star

By HARRISON CARROLL

HOLLYWOOD, June 27.—All the Somerset Maugham fans will be glad to know that Radio has not abandoned the idea of producing "Of Human Bondage." To the contrary, it will be a big picture on the fall program, and will have Irene Dunne, as well as Leslie Howard, in the cast.

The studio's unwillingness for anyone but Howard to play the part is the real reason for the delay. He finally left for New York, and will sail shortly for London. Present plans call for a picture over there and a brief vacation.

The actor has signed a long-term contract to be a Warner Brothers' star. The RKO deal was made previously, however, and will take precedence.

Meanwhile, there will be no rest for Irene Dunne. She was to do "Ann Vickers" and "Lady Sal" before the Maugham novel.

Incidentally, the star has just squelched another rumor about a rift in her marriage.

Bing Crosby turned down $4,000 a week's personal appearances at the Paramount here, so he could be close at hand when Dixie Lee has to go to the hospital.

Although Doug Fairbanks, Jr., did not get to write his novel in Italy, he made some important friends. There was a week-end at Sandwich with the Duke and Duchess of Sutherland. There's still some discussion whether Doug will play the Noel Coward or the Alfred Lunt role in the screen version of "Design for Living."

Local Boy Makes Good

THE TITLE of this story is a four-word biography of Henry Jonquil. For he had made good on a large scale. He was rich, famous and fairly young. Life was still sweet, and the depression still a rumor. He was a lucky guy, this Henry Jonquil. Very lucky.

When he was a mere kid, Kelceyville had been his world. It was a small town, with a main street, a post office, a general store, and a hay and feed emporium. And—oh, yes!—a saloon, where cursing and laughter could be heard coming from under the swinging doors on Summer nights.

That, to Henry Jonquil, was the whole world. There was nothing beyond that, except two steel rails that narrowed into the distance beyond Jones' farm.

From early morn he would sit on the milk cans at the siding and wait for the 9:37 freight to lumber slowly toward Kelceyville, and then watch with round, wide eyes as it snorted and puffed away into the distance.

Henry was 16 when the two biggest things of his life occurred. One was that his father died, and left him alone. He never remembered his mother. The other thing was that he saw his first horseless carriage.

The machine had once come through the village with a great deal of racket and smoke, and Sheriff Hardy's horses had bolted the traces and gone dashing out in the bumpy fields, with the sheriff holding on for dear life.

He heard the men in the saloon call the machine "The Devil's Contraption."

Henry Jonquil heard no more. For, on the very next morning, after waiting as usual for the 9:37, he had hopped aboard the freight as it passed the siding. He left his world for new ones.

In a large city to the north he got his first start. A wealthy horse trader had turned his stables into automobile manufactories. The boy had little trouble getting a job there.

After awhile, he persuaded his boss to let him drive one of the machines in a County Fair race. Henry won, with coattails flying. He went into more races, and won most of them. Only three times was he beaten. Once by Gaston Chevrolet. Once by a daredevil named Henry Ford. And once by that half-mile-in-a-minute speed demon Barney Oldfield.

When the racing season was over, Henry petitioned the Mayors and Aldermen of various cities to abandon fire horses for motorized trucks. The going was tough, and officials were hard to convince. And, during this stage of his work, the up-and-coming Henry Jonquil acquired a hearty dislike for horses. In those days, horses were very popular.

But Henry made plenty in his campaign against horses. So much so, in fact, that he was able to go into partnership with another automobile driver, and start manufacturing his own cars.

Then it was that the automobile really got a foothold in the American imagination. And, after two years of coining money, Henry Jonquil lost all of his zest for automobiling.

For he, you see, had the heart of a pioneer. As soon as automobiles really became popular, and politicians were promising two chickens in every garage, Henry decided to quit.

His money wasn't long idle, however. For, on his arrival in New York, he learned that two men named Wright had successfully flown a motorized egg crate at Kitty Hawk, N. C.

Without a second's hesitation, Henry Jonquil plunged into aviation knee deep in struts, wires and motorcycle motors. The first plane he flew was one that he had gone to great expense to manufacture. It took off beautifully. The only hitch in the proceedings was that Henry Jonquil was left on the ground, watching it fly in crazy circles until it fell apart on a hillside.

Discouraged? Not on your life. He manufactured another one. And then another. And still yet another. Until the war came. Then he made them by the dozen, and when they crashed in France, he made more to replace them.

Thus, the poor local boy became a great millionaire. And thus, too, the weekly newspaper in Kelceyville took up the campaign to erect a fitting monument to the greatness of the boy who made good with the very instruments they had condemned.

Henry Jonquil was seated in his sumptuous New York office when he heard of it. He thought the matter over carefully. New York was quite a distance from Kelceyville, but if he wasn't there to unveil his own monument, the old fozzles would probably call him high-hat. Oh, well . . .

He arrived, in his private car, at the very siding where he used to wait for the 9:37 freight to rumble by. The Mayor and the Board of Selectmen bowed and scraped and made speeches.

The crowds lining the sidewalks cheered him to the echo. Banners were strung over the street from the postoffice to the hay and feed emporium. "Welcome Home," read one in large red type. "Our Own Boy, Jonquil," read another. "Jonquil for President," read a third.

Jonquil smiled to the crowds. He kind of liked it. Of course, it was costing him a fortune in time, coming all the way out here, but it was worth it. These simple folk really loved him, he thought.

In the center of Main street the unveiling took place.

Henry Jonquil, blushing to his ears, made a short speech of thanks, and pulled the strings that unveiled the monument. What he saw caused him almost to faint with shock.

There was his name, boldly engraved on a new water trough—for the farmers' horses . . .

TWO MUNHALL WOMEN GET LIFE FOR POISONING BOY

RED SENTENCED DESPITE PLEA OF FRIENDS

Judge Hints Demand Of Communists Hurt Prisoner's Chances

Refusing to be influenced by Communists' demands that Bleddyn C. Thomas, 32, be freed, Judge R. M. Gibson in Federal Court today sentenced Thomas to six months in jail and cancellation of his naturalization certificate, which he was charged with obtaining fraudulently.

Thomas was convicted of concealing his communistic affiliations when he received his naturalization papers in 1928.

Answering demands for his release voiced by Thomas' fellow-Reds, Judge Gibson said:

"If a suspended sentence were given this man, the organization would take the credit.

"This court cannot be influenced."

Thomas ran afoul of the law once too often when he was nabbed in a vacant house in Penn Township, near Wilkinsburg, with a large quantity of Communistic literature. He was charged with trespassing.

But the United States Commissioner investigated the naturalization affair and Thomas odmitted he was a member of the Communist party in 1928. He denied he had sworn falsely, saying he had not been questioned about his party affiliations.

Thomas was acquitted in Criminal Court last month on charges of rioting and inciting to riot in the clash with police in front of the City-County Building March 4. Six were hurt, 30 arrested in the fray.

SCHENLEY TUBE PLAN OPPOSED

The proposed automobile traffic tunnel through Schenley Park is meeting with disfavor from the City Planning Commission.

In a letter to Council, L. W. Monteverde, head of the commission, declared the tunnel is not part of the city's major street plan.

Discussing the advisability of having the tunnel connect the new Lincoln highway and the Boulevard of the Allies, Monteverde said it would be unwise because of the heavy traffic load on the boulevard. He said the city's street plan indicates the new Lincoln highway should be connected with Saline avenue.

Motorcycle, Auto Collide; Man Hurt

Jacob Soloff, 23, of 405 Dinwiddie street, suffered cuts and bruises when his motorcycle and an automobile driven by W. H. Stupy, 64, of 1122 Ridge avenue, collided last night at West Ohio street and Sherman avenue, according to police report. Soloff was treated at Presbyterian Hospital.

'Air Rifle Shot May Blind East End Boy

James Houlihan, 8, of 6020 Bethel place, East End, may suffer the loss of his right eye, the result of being struck by a pellet discharged from an air gun of a playmate near his home late yesterday, according to police report. The boy was taken to Montefiore Hospital.

Fletcher W. Stites, Former Senator, Dies

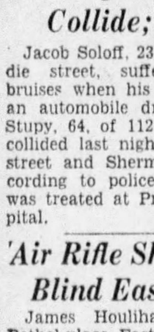
PHILADELPHIA, June 27.—(AP.)—Fletcher W. Stites, 52, former State Senator, died last night of a cerebral hemorrhage at his home in Narberth. Stites, an attorney, had been ill with heart trouble.

WILL ROGERS SAYS

SANTA MONICA, Cal., June 27.

To the Editor, Sun-Telegraph:

Did you read this fellow Hugh Johnson's statement in the papers? He is the dictator of this new "recovery act." It sounded awful good, and it made sense. Instead of letting a big concern take all the money they make and build a bigger factory, why just give the workers a little more, the stockholders a little more, and just keep the factory you have.



Will Rogers

I have heard a lot of this fellow Johnson. Barney Baruch thinks he is one of our most able men. He must be on the right track. I see where some of the "big industrialists" are kicking on him already. Well, the President couldn't have appointed a wet nurse for any more needy group of people than the "big ones."

WILL.

Aid to Home Owners Explained

By GEORGE H. SNYDER
Business Editor

This is the first of a series of articles discussing the Home Owners' Loan Act of 1933 and explaining the procedure necessary for individuals to take advantage of Federal assistance to protect the ownership of their homes.

Officials at Washington are rushing the work of organizing the Home Owners' Loan Corporation, which is being formed to protect thousands of home owners in all parts of the country from the loss of their properties.

The government recognizes the fact that thrift and home ownership are at the foundation of the solidity of our government and our economic life.

The government realizes that the fruits of years of saving and self denial are being swept away as a result of conditions beyond the control of individuals, the loss of jobs or reduced incomes.

To protect home owners from the loss of the roofs over their heads and, in some cases, to regain homes already lost, the Federal government has made available a total credit of $2,300,000,000. Of this $100,000,000 will be used for the formation of Federal Savings and Loan Associations, but the major share of the fund—$2,200,000,000—will be available for direct aid to those who are threatened with foreclosure on their homes and those who already have lost them.

The previous administration attempted to help the home owner by advancing credit to building and loan associations and other organizations which owned mortgages. This aid, while it may have been helpful, failed to do the job properly. The assistance did not reach the home owners directly. It was subject to too many restrictions.

Now the government plans to deal directly with the man whose house is in danger. This vast reservoir of $2,300,000,000 of credit is available to protect the property of the thrifty.

Some time may be needed to set up the machinery for the operation of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation. To bridge the period needed for organization, President Roosevelt has made the following plea:

"In the meantime, I appeal to mortgage creditors and all others who have claims against home owners and ask them, until full opportunity has been given to make effective the refinancing provisions of the home mortgage act, that they abstain from bringing foreclosure proceedings and that they abstain from seeking to disposses the home owners who are indebted to them.

"Co-operation between the officials of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation, the mortgagor and the mortgagees during the next few months will make many foreclosures unnecessary and will do substantial justice to all parties concerned."

Just how the individual who is threatened with the loss of his home or has lost his home may make use of this government aid will be explained in succeeding articles.

AUTO INJURIES FATAL TO BOY

Edward Baron, 3, of 1424 Adams street, North Side, died last night in Presbyterian Hospital from injuries suffered when he was struck by an automobile near his home late yesterday, the Coroner's office reported.

J. M. Richey, of 1417 Fulton street, alleged driver, was ordered to post bond at the Coroner's office.

Baby Fondling Big Blacksnake Rescued

GREENSBURG, Pa., June 27.—Left sitting in the shade as his parents worked in a relief garden, John Andrew Pearce, aged six months, was spared by the apparent unwillingness of a blacksnake to attack him.

The parents, Mr. and Mrs. Wilfred Pearce, of Hempfield Township, were attracted by the cries of an older child.

Although the baby was brushing back the waving head of the six-foot reptile, it did not strike. The snake was killed.

DIAMONDS, CASH ROBBER LOOT

A diamond ring valued at $215 and $8 in cash hidden in a mantel clock were stolen yesterday from the home of Emma M. Ritz, of 1217 Chartiers avenue. The front window was jimmied.

Removing a screen from a dining room window in the home of Mrs. Richard Large, of 1402 Wightman street, a thief ransacked the house and stole a watch, a diamond breast pin and a cigaret case. The value of the loot was not estimated.

While Mrs. Jacob Ash, of 511 North St. Clair street, was bathing in the Highland Park swimming pool yesterday, thieves broke into her automobile and stole a wrist watch valued at $60, a wedding ring and 40 cents in change, according to police report.

Protect Children, Motorists Urged

Motorists were asked today to use caution during summer months to prevent accidents to children, more of whom will be on the streets because of school vacations. The request came from the highway safety committee of the Pittsburgh Motor Club.

Batchelor also recommends the following sites as adaptable for playgrounds: Chartiers avenue near Hassler street, Larimer avenue near Hamilton avenue, Hotchkiss and Stayton streets, Thirty-second and Carson streets, and Webster avenue and Tannehill street.

FLOOD CONTROL PLAN MAY GET EARLY START

Delegation at Capital Asking Huge Fund For Reservoirs

A rapid start on construction of 10 reservoirs on headwaters of the Allegheny and Monongahela rivers is forecast if Federal authorities approve the flood control project.

With plans completed by United States Engineers, little delay is expected in acquiring the land. The policy of the government in similar improvements has been to take the necessary ground, paying the owners a generous price after condemnation.

With the Roosevelt administration indicating that it favors a waterways improvement in the upper Ohio valley, residents along the streams may awake some day to find an army of men at work in their districts.

SITES RECOMMENDED

The Flood Commission of Pittsburgh has recommended 10 locations for reservoirs, most of them corresponding to the suggesting of the Army Engineers.

The proposed sites for the dams are French Creek near Cambridge Springs, Tionesta Creek above Tionesta, Red Bank Creek below Brookville, Mahoning Creek below Punxsutawney, Crooked Creek in Armstrong County, Conemaugh River near Saltsburg, Loyalhanna Creek near its junction with the Conemaugh, Youghiogheny River above Confluence, West Fork River above Clarksburg, W. Va.; and Tygart Valley River above Grafton, W. Va.

The Pittsburgh Chamber of Commerce along with delegations from Morgantown, Fairmont, Clarksburg, and Wheeling, W. Va., was to be represented today in a conference with federal authorities in Washington seeking a grant of $60,000,000 for the construction of the reservoirs.

The delegations will include: Pittsburgh, Thomas A. Dunn and Frank C. Harper; Morgantown, Dr. Rosco Turner, D. M. Willis, John L. Hatfield, Guy Brown and Edward Brooks; Fairmont, Dr. Joseph Rosier, C. L. Shaffer, E. M. Showalters, W. T. Smallwood, Dr. Charles Byrd Mitchell, Fred Petty, H. H. Lanham, former Gov. E. F. Morgan, and Senator Henry D. Hatfield; Clarksburg, Paul Horner and Percy Boyd.

M. O. Leighton, consulting engineer for the Flood Commission of Pittsburgh, returned to Washington last night by plane, following a conference with Maj. W. D. Styer, chief of United States Army Engineers here.

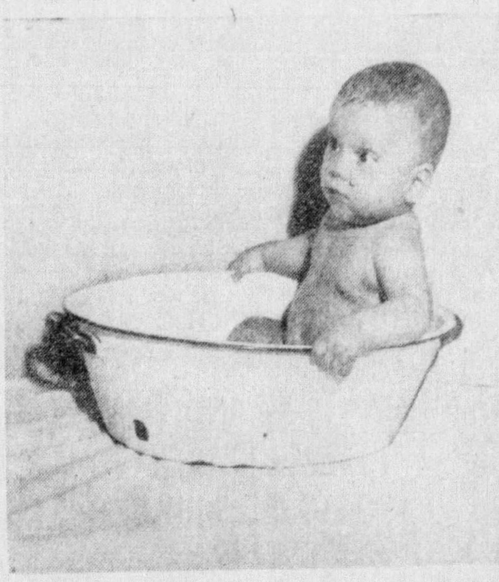
BABY JUST MUST BE KEPT COOL AND COMFORTABLE—



—AND CLEAN, WHICH IS VERY IMPORTANT TO HIM

MODERATE DOSES OF SUNSHINE, MUCH FRESH AIR

PEEK! A NETTING KEEPS AWAY FLIES AND INSECTS

Rules Given for Care Of Baby in Summer

That was the suggestion made to all Pittsburgh mothers today by the Department of Public Health in a set of 11 health hints.

Dr. William W. McFarland, head of the department, outlining the rules today, said:

"First, keep him cool and clean.

"Second, reduce clothing to a sleeveless vest and diaper.

"Third, keep him away from flies and insects.

"Fourth, keep him quiet, free from excitement, and avoid unnecessary handling.

"Sixth, be careful of his diet. Experimental feeding may cause illness.

"Seventh, increase the water, internally and externally.

"Eighth, if possible, don't wean the baby during the summer months. A breast-fed baby has a much better chance of survival than a bottle-fed baby.

"Ninth, if he is bottled-fed, keep the milk covered, cool and clean.

"Tenth, consult your physician regularly and early if there are any signs of illness.

BOTH DENOUNCE SENTENCE IN COURT

'I Ain't Guilty,' Cries One Convict in Murder Plot

Mrs. Mary Chalfa, 32, and Mrs. Anna Allas, 45, the Munhall poison murderers, today were sentenced to life imprisonment.

In tears, Mrs. Chalfa just before she was sentenced told Judge J. Frank Graff:

"I ain't guilty, I didn't do it."

It was a pale, bewildered Mrs. Allas, who through an interpreter told the court:

"They (the witnesses) lied against me."

The two women were convicted of murder in the poisoning of Mrs. Allas' stepson, 12-year-old Stephen Allas.

The women also were indicted for murder by poison in the death of another stepson, Andrew Allas, 16, but they have not been tried on this charge and probably won't be.

Insurance totalling more than $20,000 was carried on the lives of the two Allas boys.

The women's defense was that a spell had been cast over them by Mrs. Gizella Young, 35-year-old alleged fortune teller of Homeville. Mrs. Young was the state's star witness.

The bodies of the two boys were exhumed before the trial by the state to prove its charge that the women administered poison to the boys.

Counsel for the women, Attorney Louis Little, today asked Judge Graff for further argument on his motion for a new trial and, turned down, indicated he would carry his appeal to the higher courts.

BANK MEETING ON JULY 5

A mass meeting of depositors of the First National Bank of Wilkinsburg will be held in the borough high school Wednesday night, July 5, when plans for a new bank to take over the deposits of the present institution will be explained.

The mass meeting was arranged last night at a temporary depositors' meeting held at 819 Wood street, Wilkinsburg. The sale of $250,000 worth of stock, the amount necessary to open the new bank according to the plans approved by the Comptroller of the Currency, is being sponsored by the committee.

The reorganization plan will be submitted to civic and business interests this week.

Barbecue Slayer Sentenced to Life

Louis Scoratow, 24, was sentenced to life imprisonment by Visiting Judge J. Frank Graff today after his plea for a new trial was refused. He was convicted of murdering William Weddell, proprietor of a barbecue in Long Run road, near McKeesport, in February, 1930. Louis Zemler is serving a life sentence for the same murder. The killing occurred during a robbery.

Robber Hurls Water In Cashier's Face

PHILADELPHIA, June 27.—(AP.)—A pan of dirty water netted a resourceful robber $8.10.

He threw the water in the face of Miss Lillian De Haven, a cashier for the Philadelphia Rapid Transit Company, and escaped, last night, with a tray of change. Miss De Haven fainted.

Brokers Make Wheat Price Hop And Corn Pop

—By ARTHUR 'BUGS' BAER—

Markets are picking up so fast we may have to put the tickers back in the sanitariums.

Chicago grain brokers had a terrific day at the plow. They got to singing, "There's a cabin in the cotton, there's profit in the cotton, there's beer in the cabin, what wilst you habben?"

Before they quit they boosted cotton two dollars a bale, September corn popped and December wheat reached ninety cents. The boys forgot all about last January's snowballs.

Even oats and rye staged a revival meeting. That's good news for the farmer if he ever hears about it.

They tell us this speculatively was caused by the dollar playing leapfrog with the pound sterling. There ain't one man in a thousand who understands it. Therefore, we are glad to state the country is still normal.

CUBAN REBELS BALKED BY POVERTY

Karl Decker, famous newspaperman and veteran of other Cuban revolts, tells why the present uprising seems doomed to failure.

By KARL DECKER
(Copyright, 1933, Universal Service, Inc.)

There are today no more than a few hundred revolutionists in the field in Cuba and many of them are without ammunition. A revolution cannot be conducted successfully without money and the oppositionists are poverty stricken at this time.

The depression in Cuba started in 1927 and has been growing deeper every day since then. Throughout the eastern part of the island the people are without food and without clothes and there is no way in which money can be gathered to finance a revolution.

A month ago there were several committees busily at work trying to build up the revolution, but nearly all of them have dropped their activities and are waiting expectantly for action by Ambassador Welles.

The junta in New York is regarded as purely political in character and so far has accomplished little. The junta in Miami no longer has headquarters in which to gather and with Gen. Menocal still weak from his recent illness virtually nothing is being done there.

FAILURE AT MIAMI

All efforts to get an expedition away from Miami have failed and the task has been given up for the time being. A few small arms and packages of dynamite are being received in Pinar del Rio from points in Florida, carried by rum runners, but all intended for the A B C.

The Comite Ejectivo Revolucionario de Cuba, with headquarters in Havana, is still busy and has just begun sending its weekly bulletins throughout Cuba and is actively engaged in organization.

Aided by the young revolutionists of Santa Clara, Chamaguey and Oriente, this committee is rapidly enrolling revolutionists, arranging for the reception of expeditions on the coast and appointing leaders and couriers throughout the province.

This is the first intelligently directed work that has been done. Should it be possible to purchase arms and ammunition this committee will arrange for delivery in Cuba and will send into the field the men selected to take over the first guns reaching Cuba.

Having had more than a slight familiarity with revolutions and fillibustering expeditions, the survey I have made of Cuba indicates clearly that at least $300,000 will be needed to organize a successful revolution in Cuba.

WAR SUPPLIES NEEDED

At least 10,000 rifles are needed, Springfield, Model 1903, being the best that could be selected as that is the arm used in the national army in Cuba and every garrison captured would add to the ammunition supply. Several thousands small arms would have to be supplied and at least a hundred machine guns are indispensable. A dozen airplanes with ace pilots who could dispose of Machado's air force would give the insurgents an overwhelming advantage.

Also needed is an outlaw broadcasting system with several stations scattered through the island and a code that couldn't easily be broken. There is such a broadcasting station in Cuba at this time and Machadistas are busily hunting for it, but several would give an assurance of continued communication with the rebel forces.

To build up this organization will take time and money. And the revolutionists have no money.

My husband introduced me to Luckies

He had no objection to my brand of cigarettes. But, one day he asked me to try his. Well, I did—and I've been saying "Luckies Please" ever since. And it's not merely because Luckies taste fine and are ever so mild. Let me tell you the real reason.

My cigarette is a personal, intimate thing with me. After all, it touches my lips—and I do take pride in my sense of daintiness. Naturally, "Toasting" means to me even more than it does to a man—for purity is something very precious to a fastidious woman.

Lovers of weddings will sigh with regret that the last large ceremony of this exciting month of June is over. The last large wedding, that of Clara Dorothea Jenkins and Edwin M. Rhea, yesterday afternoon at 5:30 o'clock in the Church of the Ascension, was most attractive. The Rev. Boyd Edwards officiated, assisted by the Rev. Drury L. Patchell.

Bridal Satin

Her attendants wore attractive gowns, fashioned alike. The maid of honor, her sister Elizabeth, and her matron of honor, Mrs. William T. McCullough, Jr., wore frocks of green organza fashioned with trains and huge sleeves puffed to the elbow and decorated with spirals of pleated green organza ruffles.

Their wide-brimmed hats of green straw had as their only trimming an extra brim of brown organza fastened about the crown.

Green and Yellow

The bridesmaids, Louise Evans, Jane Sloan, Bettie Guiler, Mrs. Mason Reed and Suzanne Trimble, all of Pittsburgh, and Kathleen Cone, of Colonia, N. J., wore similar gowns in yellow organza and yellow straw and brown organza hats, and carried similar flowers.

Richard Rhea was his brother's best man, and the ushers were the bride's cousin, Kenneth Jenkins, of Warrenton, Va.; Thomas Ewing, Jr., Malcolm Hay, Barton Grubbs III, and Gregg Reifsnyder, all of Pittsburgh; Charles S. Parker and Samuel McCain, both of New York, and Benjamin Jones, Jr., of Wilkes-Barre.

Reception In Home

The mother of the bride wore brown lace with a brown straw hat, and the mother of the bridegroom, cream lace over green, and a natural straw hat. Both had corsages of orchids.

Among the guests who filled the church were Mrs. Herbert DuPuy, in flax blue chiffon with a jacket and a dark blue straw hat; the James Chambers McKays; the Aiken W. Fishers, with Mrs. Fisher wearing heavy yellow linen lace with a Watteau hat of yellow felt.

Mrs. George H. Love wore a smart beige crepe dress, figured in dark orange fern design, and having ruffles at the neck and a hat to match, banded in black. With her was Mrs. H. H. McClintic, Jr., in yellow and white flowered crepe with cape sleeves and a large silver straw hat, banded in yellow.

Many Guests

Caroline Mitchell was there, as were Mrs. John G. Frazer in red and white printed crepe and a red hat; Mrs. A. Cameron Mann in a blue and white flowered crepe dress; Nancy Brown in a pale blue crepe suit in swagger coat style with cartridge pleated sleeves, and Betty McKay in a red and white striped dress, and a white corduroy swagger coat having epaulettes.

La Salle Dorrance wore a navy blue crepe dress with a white silk pique mess jacket and a straw hat having a crown of white and brim of blue.

Smart Costumes

Madeleine McClintock wore a navy blue crepe suit having two rows of narrow pleats on the back of the jacket and on the skirt. Touches of white at the neck and cuffs were used for accent. Her hat was of blue felt.

The George C. Stevensons were there, Mary Carroll, Mrs. Roy A. Hunt in yellow organza; Frances Johnston in white and red chiffon with a white straw hat; Mrs. Nelson Vance Harper in blue crepe; Mrs. Hanson Rose and her daughter Gretchen were there.

Suits Popular

Mrs. H. Allen Machesney wore rose chiffon with a hat to match; Mrs. H. Allen Machesney, Jr., black and white checked organza; Eloise Dorrance, green crepe with a wide black belt and a black hat; Mrs. A. P. Brill chose a navy blue crepe suit with the jacket buttoned with silver buttons, and a navy blue straw hat; Margret Brill was in white with accents of black; Priscilla Barnes in blue net.

Also attending were Mrs. W. Rankin Furey, Mrs. H. H. McClintic, Mrs. Andrew E. Sloan, Jean Henninger, Bettie Dunlap, Mrs. Chambers McKibben, Mrs. Charles Monroe Murray, Josephine O'Neill Mrs. William T. McCullough, Mrs. Leonard K. Guiler.

Seen at Church

Alexandra Mellon Grange Makes Debut at Tea Here

Those commoners of yesterday, the daisy and the rambler rose, today are favorites at debutante parties. At the debut of Alexandra Mellon Grange, daughter of Mrs. George S. Hasbrouck, of Berwyn, Pa., formerly Lucille Mellon, yesterday afternoon in the Pittsburgh Golf Club, they featured many a charming gift bouquet.

The daisies have become much larger than the field variety, but the rambler roses are as quaint as ever. Instead of orchids galore, all the charming old garden flowers were favored—delphinium, roses—yellow and deeper yellow and white and pink ones—gladioli, peonies and rhododendrons.

Although flowers of all colors were represented in the gift bouquets, blue and pink predominated. The ballroom of the club, where the debutante received, was banked with cibotium ferns and bamboos, with bamboos and pinkish-blue rhododendrons decorating the balcony, too, and surrounding the orchestra.

The debutante, a pretty young girl with honey-colored, softly waved long hair, wore a charming gown of white silk net having pleated inserts of the net to give fullness below the hip-line, a sash of white grosgain ribbon, and a charming fitted jacket of the net having huge puffed sleeves reaching to the elbow.

At the tea, from 4 to 7 o'clock, given by her mother and her grandfather, James Ross Mellon, she wore the jacket. For the dinner-dance for the younger set following the tea, she wore the dress without the jacket. The dress had shoulder straps formed of tiny white daisies.

Her mother wore a smart gown of white matellasse cut wide over the shoulders to suggest capes, and buttoned down the back with tiny, white-covered buttons. The skirt ended in a train.

Centering the tea table, at which Mrs. W. L. Mellon and Mrs. R. B. Mellon poured, were pink peonies, blue delphinium and pink roses. Pink tapers lighted the scene.

The debutantes' aides at the tea were Gwendolen Holmes, Margaretta Oliver, Althea Robinson, Peggy Robinson, Virginia Evans, Fredericka Holdship, Mathilda Reed, Marjorie Hillman and Anne Hamilton, all of whom except Anne are already on the debutante list for the coming season.

At the dinner-dance following the tea the guests were debutantes of the past season and the coming season. Covers were laid for 100 at small tables, arranged cabaret fashion in the ballroom.

Ligonier Women To Open Year On Sept. 9

MRS. CHARLES M. BREGG

Condensation in the size of its new year book has in no wise diminished the worth of the Ligonier Women's Club program which is to be on "Let's go places and do things." Luncheon at the Fort Ligonier Hotel and the annual flower show on September 9 will start the season auspiciously.

A fashion show is next and after that a State Federation day with Mrs. John M. Philaips, first vice president, Mrs. James Graham Chalfant, district president, Mrs. S. D. Pearson, chairman of conservation, and Mrs. Paul Howe, home department chairman, as speakers.

A book review characterization in costume is the somewhat unusual feature scheduled for the second of November meetings. A visit to the International Art Exhibit, a covered dish dinner for club husbands, a talk on "The Romance of Religion," by the Rev. Dr. Albert Schweitzer, a historical meeting and tea and exhibit of antiques (and the Ligonier Valley is full of interesting ones) are all listed for the early months of the new year.

Mrs. James Le Roy Foster is to talk on "The Art of Teaching Poetry to Children." "The Family Budget" will be considered on the same day that the members exchange favorite recipes. A recital by Miss Elizabeth Campbell and Miss Ella Kassan is on the program for June 30—the annual open meeting which closes the club year and is to be held this time at the attractive home of Mrs. John Deeds.

Women to Beautify Mt. Lebanon With Fete Funds

The flower fete which the Mt. Lebanon Women's Club will have tomorrow afternoon is to serve something more than a purely social purpose, for the proceeds are to be given to the garden department's civic planning committee for use in beautifying the township.

Mrs. C. F. Goldthwait is the committee chairman, and the initial project is the landscaping of a ravine-nook in Mt. Lebanon park.

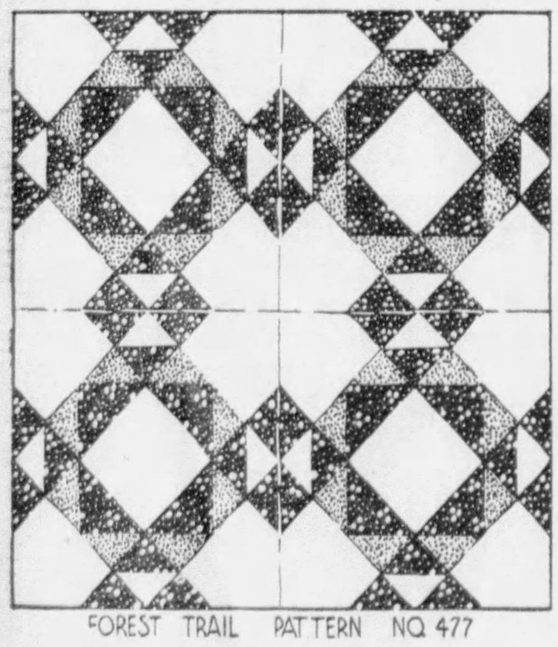
PATCHWORK QUILT PATTERN



FOREST TRAIL PATTERN NO. 477

By LAURA WHEELER

This pattern is an unusual one in that the blocks when joined give a lovely interlacing pattern like paths that twist and turn and cross each other. Made of three materials, the quilt is a simple one to do. It is an old pattern and has appeared in variations under other names. Of all the variations this alone has the charm of the interlacing pattern.

Pattern No. 477 comes to you with complete simple instructions for cutting, sewing and finishing, together with yardage chart, diagram of quilt to help arrange the blocks for single and double bed size, and a diagram of block which serves as a guide for placing the patches and suggests contrasting materials.

Parents Should Not Dictate A Youngster's Future

Have we the right to live our children's lives for them?

Have we the right to plan and pick their futures—and decide with whom they'll spend them?

And is it our precious privilege to get plenty peeved if they don't agree with our plans?

Theres' a trio of questions for which young Toba and her exasperated mother would like answers—but different ones! Yes, you guessed it; it's a Man. And the man isn't Mama's choice. And it's an easy bet that you've heard of that situation before—so of course you'll know the answer.

But before you give it, here's another question:

Just what do we really want, when we insist on living the youngsters' lives?

Do we really want to make the youngsters' dearest dreams come true? Do we want to help that boy or girl to face life bravely, eagerly, finely, even though we may know and dread the cost? Are we trying, in short, to help that young spirit become a truly great and wise individual?

Or are we just looking for some compensation for our own past failures and disappointments and frustrations?

Think it over!

Dear Miss Robinson:

For some time now I have been confronted by a situation that is very painful to me, and at last I have gathered enough courage to speak of it. I have chosen you, in my search for help, because I have great confidence in your wisdom.

I am 20, considered attractive, and am adored by parents who are young and modern themselves. Mother and I have been pals ever since I was old enough to go with boys. I started going out quite young. My parents have always harbored the idea that I was to marry a rich man.

PARENTS OBJECT

Now I have fallen in love, not with a man my mother considers suitable, but with a young man who has only a "comfortable income." I love him. He loves me. I love my parents, but they object to my marriage.

I am "between the devil and the deep sea." Mother insists that she has sacrificed her life for me, and she thinks I should marry to suit her and make her dreams come true. A professional man, or a man of wealth, is her dream of my future. She admits that it would please her vanity to have people point to her, and say: "Look whom Mrs. So-and-So's daughter has married!"

I am deeply in love with a wonderful man, who adores me. He thinks there is no one like me. And I feel that we could be very happy. He is 32.

Oh, I don't want to hurt my parents, whom I respect and love deeply. What can I do? Must I satisfy them? Or shall I follow the dictates of my own heart?

Please help me and as soon as you can—won't you? I will be so grateful. TOBA.

LIVE OWN LIFE

Must you marry to make your parents' dreams "come true?"

No honey. Life doesn't demand any such sacrifice from daughters or sons. It expects youngsters to have their own dreams—and to live them wisely and bravely. It expected Dad and Mama to. If they didn't—if they failed—that's their lookout. They have no right, then, to mess up their youngsters' lives as compensation for their own disappointments.

So, if you're sure that this man is as fine as you think, hang on to him. Don't marry any man to suit someone else. You will have to live that marriage and build your life—not your parents' lives—on it.

And your mother has no right whatever to insist that your fuure satisfy her notions or to feel hurt because she can't dictate it.

She has "sacrificed for you? What of it? Most mothers do. But if I know mothers—and I should, being one myself—she got plenty of bang out of it. She was thrilled because you were dependent on her. It made her feel important to manage you.

And now she wants to keep on managing you. Don't let her get away with it, honey. Learn to manage yourself.

Don't quarrel with her or with your father; but tell them firmly and pleasantly that when it comes to picking a husband you'll have to pick one who suits you—whether the neighbors can Point With Awe or not.

Sister in Short Shirt Pays No Dime Now, Says Fay King

By FAY KING

There was once a time when mischievous small brothers had a great power over big sisters.

It was that "little rogues" gallery picture that had been cautiously removed from the red plush family album—but found elsewhere by little Brother.

But little Brother today has no such gentle graft. Big Sister and her best boy friend pose all over the beach together wearing nothing, but little shirts.

That guy who wished everybody's children would grow up to be acrobats—has got his wish. At least they look like acrobats in bathing suits.

Heart of a Wife -:- Continuation of Love's Reawakening

Madge Fears Possibility of a Gangster's Death

My pulses constricted with fear as Harry Underwood's query "Do you suppose he can have croaked?"

Not that there was the slightest evidence of concern in his voice as he spoke the words; but I knew well what grave anxiety was his—anxiety, however, that I knew was untinged by any thought of remorse. The three men, if they could be called so, Owen, Nick and Tony, were beyond the pale of human consideration. All three of them richly deserved death. I was sure that the careers of all of them would show that, many times over. But even with all the protection afforded by our connection with the government secret service, a dead man was not to be lightly explained.

Ronald's hands convulsively clutching my arm made me realize another distressing angle of the situation.

"Which one do they think is dead?" he whispered. "Owen? Then I must have killed him. Oh, I didn't mean to do that! I wanted to pound him to a pulp, but not actually kill him."

All a boy's dread of having taken a life was in his voice. I gripped his hands tightly and spoke softly to Marion.

"Never mind me. Come around to Ronald's other side. He needs you."

She had not waited for my injunction. This I realized when I saw her already kneeling by the boy's side.

"I don't believe he's dead," she said stoutly. "We don't even know which one they're carrying that way. And anyway, even if he is dead, you can't help it. He would have killed you. And you did it for me. You saved me. But—Oh, I see! He's your uncle."

RONALD RESENTFUL

"Uncle!" Ronald started violently as he repeated the word, and I saw that unwittingly she had struck just the right note to divert his attention. "I never want to hear that hateful word again. He isn't any real relation to me, anyway," he went on, "just my stepfather's half brother. And I don't know whether I ever want to see my stepfather again."

"Why, Ronald!" Marion's voice held shocked surprise, and I realized that not yet had she learned of the suspicion that rested upon Samuel Brixton. I spoke quickly, with the realization that, if it were possible, That ugly conjecture must never reach Carolyn's ears.

"Ronald is overwrought, dear," I said, gripping his shoulder warningly. "He feels that his stepfather was criminally careless in not keeping better track of Owen's activities. But I do believe, Ronald—" I gave him that warning grip again—"that you are mistaken about your stepfather. You must reserve judgment until you see him.

"And Marion, both of you, promise me. You know how Carolyn adores him, and how good he always has been to her, and to you, Ronald. She must never know about your blaming him. Promise me."

MEN HURT BADLY

"Of course," Marion said readily, "Caro just would feel awful if her daddy was blamed for this. And I don't see how you could blame him for not knowing about Owen. He didn't seem like that kind of a man at all. I was simply sunk when I pulled that mask off and saw him and realized what he'd been planning all along. Oh, what a silly fool I was! Can you ever, ever forgive me, Ronald?"

Was she wise beyond her years? Did she realize that this was the surest way to keep Ronald from going back to the question of Owen's possible death?

"Forgive you, my—" I lost the murmured endearment, as Harry Underwood spoke sharply to the men advancing with their inert burden.

"What's the verdict?"

"This one's been losing blood," Wynne said, as he and his aide laid the unconscious Tony down upon the ground. "but we patched him up a bit, and I'm sure he'll be all right."

"Which one have you?" Harry turned to Brock.

"I guess this is the one and only Owen," Brock drawled, "and I'm sorry to report that he isn't dead yet, although he stands a pretty fair chance of passing over his checks. He ought to have a shot before we carry him any further."

How to Keep Well

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

Sunstroke Is a Danger to Be Avoided in Summer

During the summer months many persons suffer from sunstroke. This distressing accident can be prevented in most instances. It is usually traced to continued exposure to the rays of the sun or to marked activity on a hot, sultry day.

Dr. Copeland

I want to warn all my readers of the dangers associated with sunstroke. It is especially dangerous to young children and to the aged. No one will deny the beneficial action of sunlight. But moderation should be practiced, especially when the day is hot and the humidity great.

The victim of sunstroke is suddenly "overcome by the heat." He becomes pale and collapses to the ground. His skin is moist and clammy, the pulse weak and rapid, and the breathing is labored. As a rule, the pupils of the eyes become dilated and the sufferer lapses into a deep coma.

It is imperative that immediate medical attention be given. This is particularly important if the victim has a weak heart. While waiting for the physician, loosen the sufferer's clothing and, if possible, encourage him to drink water. He should be placed in a cool place, away from crowds and heat.

Sunstroke may prove to be a serious accident. A high elevation of the temperature of the body is always dangerous. If this occurs, place the sufferer in a tub of water kept cool with pieces of ice.

Keep him in the bath until his temperature has dropped to at least 102 degrees Fahrenheit. While in the tub massage the skin vigorously. This stimulates the circulation and aids in the restoration of the normal temperature.

Whenever possible, avoid strenuous and exerting work on a hot day. Children and elderly persons should not be exposed to extreme heat and sunshine. When working in the sun, take the necessary measures to prevent attacks of sunstroke.

Wear loose and cool clothing. It is a good plan to wear a helmet or hat that will protect the head, neck and back from the penetrating rays of the sun. Drink plenty of water at frequent intervals. Avoid alcoholic drinks.

Heatstroke is not the same as sunstroke. Heatstroke is a form of heat exhaustion caused by continued exposure to heat. This condition is commonly seen in stokers and others whose work requires exposure to severe heat. The signs of heatstroke differ from those of sunstroke.

In heatstroke the skin is wet, due to excessive perspiration. There are marked dizziness, weakness and muscular twitchings which are sometimes mistaken for an attack of epilepsy. In heatstroke, warmth and internal stimulants are necessary. The treatment must be supervised by a physician.

Correct Manners

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Telegram of Good Wishes

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1—I have had a young man teacher in high school for two consecutive years. He is to be married this summer, and I would like to know if it would be correct for me to send him a telegram of congratulations. Although I have never met the bride, I should send it to her home, shouldn't I?

How should it be addressed—Mr. and Mrs. Smith?

2—What would be the most appropriate thing to say? F.

1—This would be a pleasant and thoughtful thing for you to do, and I am sure that they would very much appreciate it. The telegram should be addressed Mr. and Mrs. Smith, even though you have not met the bride, and should be sent to the home of the bride.

2—Some message of this kind: "Every good wish to you both for your happiness always."

Wedding Plans

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I am a young widow and am going to be married next month. Here is the question:

Is it proper to have my stepfather as sponsor at my wedding? Many people say that it is not correct and some people say that it is, so I am coming to you. It is going to be a church wedding at 4 o'clock in the afternoon. T.

If you wish to have your stepfather present you in marriage, it is quite the proper thing for you to do. This is entirely a question of your own choice, your own reaction. I judge from your letter that you and your stepfather are congenial, and that you would like to have him give you in marriage. If there is no family complications about this, by all means do it.

Contract Bridge -:- HOW TO PLAY and HOW TO WIN

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

Bidding a Grand Slam

One of the practice matches played by the American team in preparation for its invasion of England gave Mr. Walter Beinecke and his partner, Mr. Lee Langdon, an opportunity for some very brilliant and accurate bidding, through which they reached a Grant Slam contract. The bidding was unusual in that at one stage of the bidding Mr. Langdon deliberately underbid with the purpose of later being able to disclose the makeup of his hand, reasoning that the combined hands should produce a Grand Slam, but desiring to reach that end with safety rather than by mere guessing. While, as it happened, I was on the losing side, I could not but admire the finely spun thread of inferences which guided my opponents to their correct contract. The hand was:

South, Dealer.

East and West vulnerable.

	♠ K J 9 8 6 3 2 ♡ A K 3 ◇ K Q ♣ 10
Mr. Culbertson ♠ 5 ♡ J 8 7 5 ◇ 10 7 ♣ Q 9 8 5 3 2	North West East South	Mrs. Culbertson ♠ 10 7 ♡ Q 10 9 4 ◇ 9 8 4 3 ♣ K 7 4
	♠ A Q 4 ♡ 6 2 ◇ A J 6 5 2 ♣ A J 6

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ◇	Pass	2 ♠ (1)	Pass
3 ♠ (2)	Pass	4 ♠ (3)	Pass
4 N T (4)	Pass	7 ♠ (5)	Pass
Pass	Pass

1—Obviously a very fine Forcing Takeout. While North holds only two cards in his partner's bid suit, he has a seven-card suit of his own and 4 honor-tricks, rather than the minimum of 3½.

2—South also holds a very fine hand, justifying, as a matter of fact, a much stronger bid than three spades. However, the underbid at this point is deliberate, the purpose being disclosed on the next round of bidding.

3—North studied the situation at this point with considerable care. It is true he has a strong hand and his partner has assured him of adequate spade support, but still South's hand may be something like: spades Q 10 x, hearts Q J x, diamonds A J x x, clubs K Q J, and if this is true, South still has an Opening bid and a Raise for the spades, but absolutely no play for a Slam.

4—The situation which Mr. Langdon desired has come about. He can now make the bid of four no-trump to show his partner three Aces. The rest is then up to North. Of course, South intends to play for a Slam in any event, but whether it is a Small or a Grand Slam North must decide.

5—North's bid of the Grand Slam is obvious. He knows that his partner's four-notrump bid shows the spade Ace, the diamond Ace and the club Ace. As he holds the King of Diamonds and the King of spades, it is apparent that the Grand Slam must be made against anything but the most freakish distribution, such, for instance, as the ruff of East's Opening lead by West.

TODAY'S QUESTION

You hold

♠ A Q 10 8 3 2 ♡ A Q 9 ◇ K Q 5 ♣ 4

You are vulnerable and bid one spade. Your partner bids four spades. What do you bid?.

Answer: Six spades. There is practically no holding that your partner can have to justify three Raises which will not give you a better-than-even chance for a Slam. If he has not both Aces, he must have the heart King plus a singleton, or he may even have a void; in addition, of course, to solidifying your spades. Five spades is incorrect, as partner may conceivably pass and your hand warrants taking all the action yourself.

BEGINNING OF END FOR FADING RUTH

WHILE JOE M'CARTHY says it was only because of the heat that he lifted Babe Ruth from the Yankee lineup, and that the benching of the former home run king is merely a temporary step to give Ruth a chance to rest for a few days, to most fans it looks like the beginning of the end. If the manager aimed only to save Babe from the heat, sideline observers may be pardoned for wondering why Joe used Ruth in all five games, including a double-header, in St. Louis, the hottest place on the major league map, and then benched him the very next day in the series at Detroit.

Babe Ruth

The benching of Ruth for failure to hit is something that few fans expected ever to see. They figured the Bambino would be allowed to play out his string, and then would retire gracefully from the field to a managerial job. That might have been possible if the Yanks were far out in front and coasting along to another certain pennant. But desperate cases require remedies, and with New York ousted from first place by Washington, McCarthy had to forget about past reputations and the box office and go after ball games. Ruth still has a batting average of .303 for the season, but the explanation of his benching is to be seen in the fact that in his last 17 trips to the plate he has made only two hits, an average of just .118.

Babe may come back and put on a big rally for a time, but it can hardly last. The sun-baked fields and the burden of his 39 years probably will be too much for him. Everybody is sorry to see baseball lose its greatest figure, but it looks as though the Babe is on his way out and that the present season will be his last as a player.

WHEN THE BRAVES released Pitcher Harry Seibold to Albany to make room for Ray Starr, purchased from the Giants, it marked the passing from the major leagues of the last of the players used by the Cubs in the purchase of Rogers Hornsby in one of the biggest deals of modern times.

To obtain Hornsby from Boston on November 7, 1928, the Bruins gave not only a sum reported all the way from $100,000 to $200,000, but also Seibold, Pitchers Percy Jones and Bruce Cunningham, Second Baseman Fred Maguire and Catcher Louis Leggett. Now they're all back in the minors.

THERE IS AN alleged hoodoo locker at Ebbets Field in Brooklyn. Dazzy Vance had it before he was traded to the Cards. Next it was used in turn by Del Bissonette and Watson Clark, and neither stayed.

It didn't feaze Johnny Frederick, however, when it was allotted to him. He admitted being superstitious, like most ball players, but said he had no fear of that particular jinx. And the first day he used the locker he won a game for the Careys in the ninth inning.

THOUGH CHARLEY GRIMM repeats that the pennant fight in September will be among the Cards, Giants and Cubs, he admits the Pirates will rally from their slump of May and June. "They're a bit weak in pitching, but otherwise a good club," Grimm remarked to John Kieran. "They tell me Vaughan was fielding badly for a while, but he's a cracking good hitter, that boy. Maybe he'll steady down in the field. Look at that outfield. Who could have guessed that anything like that would happen? If any one had told me in the spring that those three fellows would be batting 'way down where they are, I'd have said he was crazy. Still, I think they'll come out of it. They're bound to do so. I know those Waners too well to think of them as easy marks at the plate. Yes, sir, we've beaten the Pirates nine times—lost four to 'em—but I still figure it's a dangerous club outside of the pitching. You can't tell me those Waners aren't going to hit."

KEEP ON SWINGING at good balls without losing patience or nerve, is Babe Herman's advice to slumping hitters. The Cub slugger reasons that the old law of averages eventually will come to the assistance of a good sticker whose drives sooner or later are bound to land where the fielders cannot get their hands on them.

Babe Herman

Herman says the best advice he ever received came from Ty Cobb and Frank Chance when he played under them at Detroit and Boston as a greenhorn. They told him to use his own judgment at the plate and pay no attention to suggestions from other players. The only way to cure a slump, Babe says, is to take your time, act naturally, and work yourself out of it.

AS BABE SEES it, many players, when they cannot hit the ball safely, worry so much that they lose confidence in themselves. When a nervous player strikes out or pops up he goes back to the bench crestfallen fearing that he is going to be traded or released.

Herman does not view things in that light. He keeps on swinging and waits confidently for the tide to turn. He says he knows he can hit, and for that reason his present average of exactly .300 does not worry him. He feels sure that it will be as high as ever when the season ends.

IN THE OPINION of a veteran mid-Western football observer, it is unlikely that college grid coaches could improve the game by adopting some of the principles of rugby, as often suggested. Rugby is replete with lateral passes, but these are necessary, as forward passing and interference are illegal in that sport. Broken-field running is hard to execute, because blocking is prohibited and there are too many men in the way. Jack James, of the Princeton rugby team, is pointed out as an exhibit. In American football he used to make a specialty of lugging the ball almost the length of the field, but he has made few worth-while gains for the Tigers in rugby.

MANY BOXING MEN thought Joe Jacobs was talking through his hat last week when he offered Sam Pian, who holds the contract of Barney Ross, $20,000 in cash for the Chicago fighter who was then only a title challenger, but Jacobs insisted that he knew what he was doing, and developments bore out his judgment.

That's a high price for a boxer's contract these days, but Ross is lightweight champion now, and Jacobs would have profited by his investment. Joe has not bothered about other fighters for several years, devoting all his time to handling Max Schmeling. His eagerness to get Ross would seem to indicate a belief on his part that Schmeling isn't going to do much more fighting.

HUNK ANDERSON, Notre Dame football coach, wants you to take his word for it that the Irish gridiron outlook is uncertain because there are numerous sophomores on the squad and you can't tell much about men who are playing their first season on the varsity.

Hunk Anderson

But in the next breath, Anderson reveals that Fullback Dan Hanley, who has returned to school, is now on the fourth string. The average football follower is led to believe that if a man as good as Hanley is that far down the line those doubtful sophomores that Anderson talks about, and the remainder of the material for 1933, must be pretty fair.

DURING A VACATION trip to Los Angeles with Marchmont Schwartz, Anderson said that except for the uncertainty about sophomore material Notre Dame is fairly well fixed in most positions for next year. "But I don't know yet what we'll do for a quarterback," said the South Bend mentor. "We haven't had a really good one since Carideo left. For the present, I plan on using Mazziotti, a sophomore, there, but you know how sophomores are. It takes at least one year of varsity play before you have a man properly seasoned. Mazziotti comes from around the locality that produced Carideo. I hope he'll act something like Frank. Then there's McGuff, too, for quarter. Laurie Vejar has no more football eligibility, due to having competed a year in track. I wish I had him back. Elzer, the big sophomore fullback, has the markings of a fine player. Pilney at halfback also is going to be good some day, but he, too, is only a sophomore. In fact, we're going to have a lot of sophomores, and you can't tell about that kind of club."

PIRATE-GIANT BARGAIN BILL RAINED OUT

NEW YORK, June 27.—For the second time in two days rain and wet grounds have kept the Pittsburgh Pirates idle. The doubleheader scheduled with the New York Giants here this afternoon was postponed because of wet grounds. The local management announced that the series, originally calling for three games, will be concluded with a dual bill tomorrow.

The mid-summer scraps between the Pirates and Giants, starting today, offer a contrast between two rival athletes who were much in the limelight when the snow lay on the ground last winter. Fred Lindstrom and Glenn Spencer, the two players exchanging places in a big swap of the cold weather, were believed to be destined for their greatest glory on the diamond, only to see the fates turn against them.

LINDSTROM SLUMPS

Lindstrom, in particular, seems to have seen things curdle. After the deal had been completed the sports journalists threw a lot of fine phrases indicating that the Pirates would sport the best outfield in the game. Well, to date, the Rovers appear to have reached a new low in all-around efficiency.

Lindstrom's batting became so mushy he had to be yanked from the lineup. The strange thing about the Pirate outfield situation is seen in the "sympathetic" slumps in which the Waner boys indulged after Lindy had run afoul of trouble. There is something rotten in Denmark when Paul and Lloyd Waner bat below .270 as the firecracker day draws near.

COMMY BIG STAR

The best outfielder on the Pittsburgh club at this writing is a Polish fellow named Adam Comorosky. Adam was a fifth consideration in a field of five pasture men when the Pirates opened the season; in other words, Manager Gibson figured the Waner boys, Lindstrom and Jensen to be more valuable that the coal miner. But if Gibby had not had Commy in the past week or two his club might have been in much worse shape than it is.

The Spencer angle of the big deal of the winter also is remarkable. Glenn seemed to be in a spot where he might bounce into the headlines, as the Giants were supposed to be shy of good pitching material.

YANKEE TEAM IS DEFEATED 6½-5½

SOUTHPORT, Eng., June 27.—(AP.)—Great Britain regained possession of the Ryder Cup, emblem of Anglo-American professional golf rivalry, today, defeating the United States, 6½ points to 5½, in two days' competition.

Syd Easterbrook, British pro, scored the deciding victory by defeating Densmore Shute, 1 up, 36 holes, as the climax of one of the most exciting international golf battles ever waged, with the outcome in doubt until the last hole of the final match was complete.

SINGLES DIVIDED

The British divided the eight singles matches played today, but won the foursomes yesterday, 2½ to 1½.

The Americans were in the lead only once during the two days, when Capt. Walter Hagen vanquished A. J. Lacey, 2 and 1, with the Prince of Wales as an onlooker, but the team score twice was tied by the invaders before the decisive British blow was struck by Easterbrook.

The other three American conquests were scored by Gene Sarazen, who defeated Alfred H. Padgham, 6 and 4; Craig Wood, who beat W. H. Davies, 4 and 3, and Horton Smith, victor over Charles Whitcombe by 2 up in a match that tied the score for the last time.

The biggest upset for the Americans was the trouncing administered to Olin Dutra, P. G. A. champion, by Abe Mitchell, who captured 13 out of 14 successive holes and won by 9 and 8 after being 3 down at the tenth.

LEO DIEGEL BEATEN

The other two British triumphs were posted by Arthur Havers, who beat Leo Diegel, 4 and 3, and Percy Alliss, who won a sensational match from Paul Runyan, youngest of the Americans, 2 and 1.

O'LOUGHLINS WIN DOUBLES NET CROWN

By PAUL G. SULLIVAN

Dr. John O'Loughlin and his brother, Dr. Dave, terminated 10 days of competition in the forty-fifth annual Western Pennsylvania tennis championships at the Stanton Heights Golf Club yesterday by annexing the men's doubles crown in a bitterly contested straight-set final battle with Frank Broida, Pittsburgh Parks premier, and Billy, youngest of the O'Loughlin net clan, 7-5, 9-7, 6-2.

A few minutes prior to the close of the men's doubles, Margaret Carspecken, Morgantown ace, and Miriam Sullivan, P. A. A. performer, downed Mrs. Martha Guthrie Snowdon and Mrs. John Ricketson III, Allegheny Country Club duo, 6-1, 5-7, 6-2, to capture women's doubles laurels.

P. A. A. STARS WIN

The competition represents a complete clean-up for the forces of the P. A. A. and Morgantown, John O'Loughlin having edged out Dave in a five-set singles title tussle Sunday, while Miss Carspecken was dethroning Dorothy Anderson, of Butler, in the feminine singles division and pairing with the writer, Red and Gray team-mate of the O'Loughlins, to cop the mixed doubles from Mrs. Ricketson and her Sewickley partner, Bill Brown.

Miss Sullivan was compelled to stand up under continual fire as Mrs. Snowden and Mrs. Ricketson directed attack away from Miss Carspecken in the women's dual get-away. The Steel City girl sustained the onslaught quite effectively, however.

TWO EVENTS COMING

With the West Penn affair out of the way, attention of district racqueters will be divided during the remainder of the week between the Allegheny County championships at the Westinghouse Club, Greensburg Pike, and the Southern Pennsylvania classic at the Westmont Tennis Club, Johnstown. The Allegheny conclave gets under way Thursday, with the South Penn meet inaugural set for tomorrow afternoon.

Allegheny County men's and women's singles entries will be received in care of Frank Marclay at the Westinghouse Club, 501 Pennwood avenue, Wilkinsburg, until 6 o'clock tomorrow evening. Aspirants in men's, women's, and mixed doubles have till the ensuing afternoon to sign up. Names will be taken by telephone at Churchill 0280.

SHARKEY APPEARS FIT FOR TITLE BATTLE

CHAMP SHOWS GREAT FORM IN WORKOUT

NEW YORK, June 27.—Primo Carnera may expect to catch Jack Sharkey out of condition when they step into the ring of Madison Square Garden's Long Island City bowl Thursday night, but if he does, he'll run into an unpleasant surprise.

Jack, at 30, won't be the Sharkey of a few years ago perhaps, but he'll be in first class shape just the same, trained to the minute and ready for the long 15-round route.

JACK LOOKS FIT

An examination by Dr. Vincent Nardiello, of the medical staff of the New York State Athletic Commission, effectively disposed of the question of the champion's condition. Dr. Nardiello said:

"Sharkey is in better shape physically and mentally than he was when I examined him a year ago for his fight with Max Schmeling. His disposition is greatly improved. He was too much on edge last year, too nervous."

Sharkey, as a matter of fact, never has looked better than he did yesterday in a sizzling workout with Hans Birkie, rugged German warrior, at his training camp in Orangeburg, N. Y. The champion was punching viciously to the body with his right hand, snaking punches home with lightning speed, and twice shook up Birkie with left hooks that traveled only inches.

Carnera, meanwhile, wound up his intensive preparations at Pompton Lakes, N. J., by boxing three rounds with Harold Mays and two against Arthur Huttick. Both found the huge Italian easy to hit, but hard to hurt.

Carnera plans no more boxing and will take only enough exercise until the night of the fight to keep himself at top condition. Sharkey expected to wind up boxing today.

ADVANCE SALE POOR

Although there was no accurate estimate on advance sales, boxing writers began scaling down their original predictions of a crowd of 60,000 and receipts of about $350,000. Business at the Garden box office was slow and some observers expressed the belief the gate might not be much in excess of the $240,000 Jack Dempsey drew with his Max Baer-Max Schmeling battle, although he charged $10 "tops" against $15 for Thursday's match.

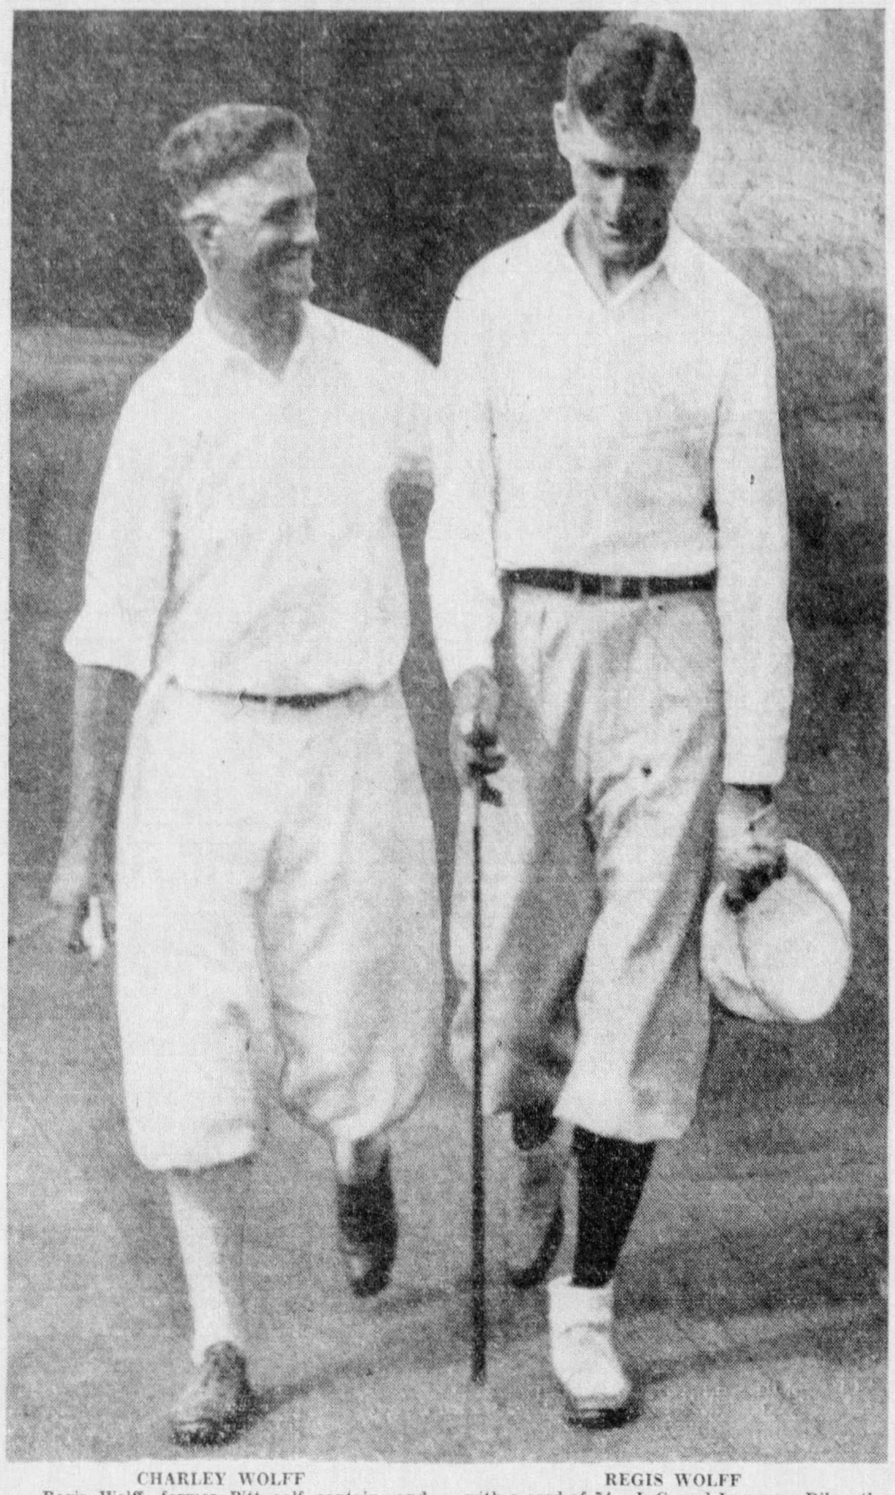
Win Father and Son Golf Title



CHARLEY WOLFF

Regis Wolff, former Pitt golf captain, and his dad, of the Highland Country Club, yesterday won the twelfth annual Fathers' and Sons' golf tournament at the Allegheny Country Club with a card of 74. J. C. and Lawrence Dilworth were one stroke behind and J. M. Wells, Sr., and Jr., third. A crack field took part in the event. This is a Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph picture.

HELEN MOODY, VINES WIN AT WIMBLEDON

WIMBLEDON, England, June 27.—(AP.)—Ellsworth Vines, Jr., defending his Wimbledon tennis title, today advanced to the third round with a four-set victory, 6-1, 4-6, 7-5, 6-1, over A. T. England, unranked British player.

Lester Stoefen, giant California youngster playing his first tournament at Wimbledon, defeated the Japanese champion, R. Nunoi, in a bitter five-set struggle, 9-7, 2-6, 9-7, 1-6, 6-2.

Mrs. Helen Wills Moody opened defense of her title with a smashing love set victory over Mrs. J. P. Macready, veteran British player, 6-0, 6-0.

MRS. MOODY BRILLIANT

Mrs. Moody had the galleries gasping at the brilliance of her shots as she ran out her match against Mrs. Macready in just 17 minutes. She was the same brilliant champion Wimbledon knew last year, and the margin of her victory increased the odds in favor of her taking the sixth Wimbledon title to tie the record of Mlle. Suzanne Lenglen, her predecessor as No. 1 of the world.

Vines had his hands full for a time with the 24-year-old Lancashire player, England at one time leading 5-3 in games with the sets at one all, but once he got under full steam Vines had little trouble.

His own errors in the second and third sets were largely responsible for his losses there, and even the well-bred English crowd laughed at some of the ridiculous shots he made.

PERRY DEFEATED

The other tall man from California, Stoefen, also was in an erring mood as he met the delicately-stroking Nunoi, and in the end it was his superior stamina which meant victory.

Nat Farquharson, South African veteran, engineered the first major upset of the tournament as he defeated Fred Perry, England's No. 1, 7-5, 6-1, 3-6, 4-6, 6-4. The summary:

BRITONS BEAT U. S. GOLFERS

tween 25,000 and 30,000 ganged about the players in the last two matches, jostling them and even hemming in the Prince of Wales.

The triumph not only meant possession of the cup for England during the next two years, but tied the entire series at two victories each. The Americans previously won twice in their own country and lost in England, while another match of the series did not count because the trophy was not in competitnon at the time. HELEN MOODY, GIZZY BEATEN BY PAIN IN THE NECK

TONIGHT'S FIGHTS

By HARRY KECK
Sports Editor

There have been a lot of fights that have been pains in the necks of the boxing fans, past and present, and there will be many more of the same in the years to come, but for the first time around here a fight was officially won and lost on a pain in the neck last night at Hickey Park, Millvale.

Battling Gizzy, of Donora, was the loser and Eddie Zivic, of Lawrenceville, the winner, the referee Red Robinson, diqualifying Gizzy after 25 seconds of the fifth round when he went down a second time without being hit and rolled about on the floor.

The Gizzler first went down as the fourth round ended, and the bell rang at the count of four and he got up and went to his corner holding the left side of his neck. Just before this he had indicated an injury to his right hand, but resumed using it and then began to cover up and turn his head away without apparently being hit.

PURSE WITHHELD

That was the beginning of the end. He adopted similar tactics as the fifth round opened, and the referee warned him he would be disqualified unless he stood up and fought. Then came his collapse in midring.

The Boxing Commission ordered Gizzy's purse held up. Dr. J. W. McMeans, the Commission doctor, examined the Battler in his dressing room and said he could not detect any signs of a neck injury claimed by Gizzy. The latter said he had been struck on the side of the neck and it had stiffened and he couldn't turn it to the left. He said a similar injury had caused him to be stopped in his return bout with Chino Alvarez in Georgia a few months ago, and traced it to a tonsil condition. He said it was painful, which gave the bout a truly pain-in-the-neck finish.

Up to the time Gizzy began to show signals of distress he was winning the bout, a return engagement, handily. He rushed from from the start and was outboxed in the first round, in which Zivic managed to keep out of his way and counter his swinging leads. He was too strong for Eddie in the second, however, and rushed and scored at will, and, in the third, virtually mobbed Zivic as he bulled him around the ring and sprayed him with all manner of punches, once forcing him through the ropes onto the ring platform. Then came the fourth and the odd turning of events.

JACOBY, GREEN BEATEN

Harry Jacoby, new local welterweight, formerly of Newark, N. J., who had won two previous battles here with technical knockouts, ran against a stumbling block in rugged Joey Bazzone, of McKeesport, in the eight-round semi-final, and the latter outfinished him to win the decision in a hard battle. It was a good win for Bazzone, an upset of the dope.

In the other eight-rounder Casey Rhodes, Negro southpaw middleweight, subbing on short notice, won the decision over Anson Green, Homestead Negro, although he faded badly toward the finish and was taking a sound punching in the last three rounds. His southpaw stance and smart leading and clinching tied up Green during the first five rounds, during which Rhodes piled up a sizable lead. This outcome also was a surprise.

Fritzie Zivic, brother of Eddie, started out as if he would knock out Don Asto, of Uniontown, in a round or two and then found himself with a hard fight on his hands and had to step all of the way to keep in front in the six-round second bout.

MANCINI VICTOR

Jimmy McCoy, former local boxer, made his debut as a judge and was off to a good start.

There will be no show at Hickey Park next Monday, because the regular date falls on the eve of July Fourth.

Between Rounds

Frank Klaus reports that his Jimmy Belmont is working harder than he has at any time in his career for his 10-round windup with Billy Holt in the North Braddock Bowl, Thursday night, and will be in good condition, although he has not had a bout since last December.

Amateur bouts are scheduled tonight at both the St. Peter's A. A. Arena, on the North Side, and under the auspices of the Pittsburgh Lyceum in the Epiphany School yard.

STRENGTHEN HITTING MUSCLES FOR DISTANCE

Watching Paul Runyar play wooden second shots with plenty of distance and accuracy to the green, an average player wonders where all the power comes from. Runyan is far from the poundage considered necessary by many to achieve such yardage. Yet a close observation of the illustration above will in a degree reveal one of the secrets.

The body turn is quite complete with his back presented to the line of flight showing that on the downswing he will be enabled to put considerable body weight into the shot. For the average player the matter of gaining distance is somewhat of a slow process. Many despair and content themselves thereafter with a mere arm and shoulder hit. However, if one perseveres in attempts to gain a true picture of the correct body turn and practices along this line, the hitting muscles will be strengthened in time.

Once this is achieved, with mind and muscle co-ordinating properly in the matter of timing, the yards one covers from a well-hit shot will be surprising.

WOMEN'S GOLF CHAMP PLAYS AT LATROBE

Virginia Van Wie, of Chicago, national women's golf champion, was to perform in a special exhibition match over the Latrobe Country Club links this afternoon, playing with a foursome made up of Mrs. W. G. Strodes, C. E. Anderson, John Hulton and W. C. Carnegie. Miss Van Wie is the house guest of Mrs. Strodes at Morningside Farms, Ligonier. The match is open to the public and was to get under way at 1:30 o'clock.

Miss Van Wie

The presence of the national champion should attract a large turnout of golf fans from Westmoreland County and the surrounding district. Miss Van Wie shot brilliant golf to attain the championship.

Betty Abernathy, of Oakmont, still shooting a brilliant brand of golf, is leading the Western Pennsylvania two-day tourney over the links of the Westmoreland Country Club. Miss Abernathy's 87 yesterday gave her a lead of two shots over Mrs. L. K. Friedman, of Westmoreland, when the field started out this morning for the last 18 holes of play.

Mrs. W. F. McCrady had the low net score in the first division with 96-15—81. Trailing Mrs. Friedman in third place came Barbara Warmcastle, with a 90, and in fourth place, Mrs. C. J. Wendt and Mrs. L. G. Riley were deadlocked, each with a 91.

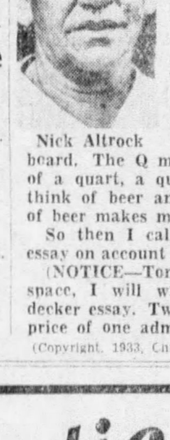
Mary Kuhn and Mrs. B. R. Shriver each had 94s and Emilie Roseburgh had a 96.

In the second division, Mrs. J. A. Lowry and Mrs. R. F. Phillips tied for the low net lead with 81s and Mrs. H. A. Neeb, Jr., led the third division with 101-29-72.

BASEBALL COMEDY

—By NICK ALTROCK—

CLEVELAND, June 27.—Sometimes when Uncle Nick starts writing his daily essay, he hasn't an idea in his head. So I sit around a while, thinking. Then I try sitting around a while and not thinking. Still I can't get an infant's size fraction of an idea.



Nick Altrock

Finally I get restless and unpack my portable typewriter and begin strumming the Q key, which is up in the corner of the keyboard. The Q makes me think of a quart, a quart makes me think of beer and the thought of beer makes me drool.

So then I call off my daily essay on account of wet grounds.

(NOTICE—Tomorrow, in this space, I will write a double-decker essay. Two ideas for the price of one admission.)

KISKI GOLFER, TEAM AHEAD

GREENWICH, Conn., June 27.—(AP.)—Sidney Carson, of Kiski, led a field of 70 prep school golfers yesterday in the opening qualifying round of the twenty-second annual eastern scholastic golf tournament at the Greenwich Country Club.

Carson's score of 73 was two over par for the course. On the last nine holes, he shot three birdies and had par for every hole.

Close at his heels were Morris Nee and William Detweiler, both of Georgetown prep, who had 76 each. Eleven of the youthful golfers hit 80 or better.

Kiski was first in the team competition, while Georgetown prep and Lawrenceville, winner last year, were second and third. Kiski had a score of 321.

BROWN APPROVED

ALBANY, N. Y., June 27.—(AP.)—Gov. Lehman has approved the selection of William J. Brown, of New York, as a member of the State Boxing Commission to succeed the late William Muldoon. Brown was nominated for the job by Secretary of State Edward J. Flynn. The term is for two years.

WOLFFS ANNEX GOLF TITLE

By TOM BIRKS

Charley Wolff, popular member of the Highland Country Club, and his son, Regis, former captain of the University of Pittsburgh golf team, won the twelfth annual fathers and sons' tourney, played over the links of the Allegheny Country Club yesterday, shooting the 18 holes in 74. They beat out J. C. Dilworth and his son, Lawrence, of Fox Chapel, by one shot.

J. M. Wells and J. M. Wells, Jr., of East Liverpool, landed in third place with a score of 76.

A four-putt green on the outgoing nine cost the Dilworths the title. The Wolff family three-putted once for the only six on their card.

TIE FOR FOURTH

J. R. and W. B. Nicklin, of Stanton Heights, finished in a tie for fourth place with T. H. Smith and P. H. Davidson, of Fox Chapel, each pair carding a 71. H. R. Mather and H. R. Jr., of Latrobe, and C. McK. Lynch and C. McK., Jr., of Greensburg, and 72s, as did J. F. Byers and J. F. Jr., of Allegheny, and Charles and Xavier Totten, of Stanton Heights.

Practically the entire field had trouble on the homeward nine. When the Wolffs made the turn with a 34, one under par, the title generally was conceded to be theirs. But when the Dilworths and the Wellses holed out on the ninth green for a 36 the battle was on again.

Young Lawrence Dilworth made a magnificent effort to tie up the score on the last hole. His dad got off a poor tee shot and when Lawrence tried to reach the green he pushed his shot into the rough away to the left. Dad pitched splendidly out of the trouble and left a 16-foot side hill putt. The boy sized up the situation, putted carefully, but the ball stopped right on the edge of the cup.

BYERS ELECTED

Prior to the start of play, the board of governors of the association met and elected J. Frederic Byers, of Allegheny, president to succeed the late James Francis Burke, who had been the head of the organization since its inception in 1922.

W. C. Fownes, Jr., of the Oakmont, was re-elected vice-president for the twelfth year, and George Ormiston, also of Oakmont, was elected secretary-treasurer.

J. F. Byers, W. C. Fownes, Jr., George Ormiston, W. A. Irvin, A. K. Oliver, G. P. Rose, Tom Jamison, R. A. Smith, E. E. Hewitt, Judge R. M. Gibson and James L. Marks were elected to the board of governors.

Ted Luther, of the Valley Heights Country Club, won the Uniontown Country Club professional tourney yesterday, shooting a 34-34—68, three under par, to lead home 23 of the outstanding professionals of the district.

Andy Velican, of Nemacolin, and Vincent Eldred, of Highland, were tied for second place. Both had 72s.

SHIELDS, HALL WIN

NEW YORK, June 27.—(AP.)—Frank Shields made his first appearance in the Eastern clay court tennis championships yesterday and pushed his way into the fourth round without trouble. Shields, seeded No. 1, drew a first round bye, received a default in the second round and defeated Reginald Talmage, of Brooklyn, 6-2, 6-3. J. Gilbert Hall, of South Orange, N. J., likewise advanced to the fourth round when his third round rival, E. Ralph Martin, defaulted.

KOWAL COLLEGE GOLF LEADER

WILLIAMSVILLE, N. Y., June 27.—(AP.)—Hank Kowal, of Utica, captain of the Colgate team, shot a par-equalling 72 this morning to bring his 36-hole total to 145 and give him a commanding lead for the medal in the annual intercollegiate golf title play.

Kowal went out in 35, one under par, and finished with a 37 for the incoming nine. Sidney Noyes, of Yale, who shot a 73 yesterday, added the same figure to his total today to give him an aggregate of 146.

Par was matched earlier in the day when M. P. Warner, of Yale, came in with perfect figures. He carded an 83 yesterday, however, and his total was 155.

Charley Yates, of Georgia Tech, posted the best round of the earlier finishers as he shot a three-under-par 69. He had a 77 yesterday. The scores:

Carroll Sweet, Michigan	81	79—160
Richard Lutz, Ashland	83	81—164

ECONOMISTS IN EUROPE SCORED

By MERRYLE S. RUKEYSER
Universal Service.

NEW YORK, June 27.—A coroner's inquest on economics was recently held in London.

An influential group wanted to find out why professional economists had lost their influence. In alluding to the investigation, the London Economist commented:

Mr. Rukeyser

There was never a time when the advice of the economic expert was so often asked and so seldom followed as the present.

The subject was pursued at a serio-comic mock trial at the London School of Economics at which Sir William Beveridge, Sir Arthur Salter, Hubert Henderson and Prof. Gregory were charged by Robert Boothby, member of Parliament, with "conspiring to spread mental fog."

In his indictment in behalf of the man on the street, Boothby brutally charged that economists were unintelligible; that they had in general proved wrong; and that in any case they disagreed among themselves. He specified wide variation of views on such subjects as saving and spending, the gold standard and protection.

DEFENSE GIVEN

In self defense, Sir Arthur Salter remarked that seldom do the public or the politicians really wish to find out what they ought to do; they rather wish to be given reasons for doing what they have already decided to do on other grounds.

Sir William Beveridge and Prof. Gregory stressed the point that the economist is compelled to act as both physiologist and doctor at once.

They contended that in so far as the economist is investigating the bare fundamentals of his science, the disagreements and agreements he reaches are purely economic and in this region of his study there exists as solid a body of assured truth, and as small a fringe of dissension, as in any other major science. But, they added, when it comes to the practical application of these truths to particular questions, a host of political, ethical and sentimental issues supervene, on which difference of opinion is inevitable and economic science is not qualified to judge.

BACKED BY ROOSEVELT

Over on this side of the ocean, the economists are hardly in as bad repute.

Their prestige waned greatly during the depression when the banks and other institutions which they had been advising floundered badly.

The routine economists frequently errs by ascribing perennial wisdom to the classical economists, assuming that they have laid down the economic law minutely for all ages. As a matter of fact, the mid-victorian economists were brilliantly describing and commenting upon contemporary economic life, and would be the first to recognize the fundamental changes subsequently wrought by conditions of mass production in the power age.

STOCKS MARCH FORWARD ON FARM BOOM

NEW YORK, June 27.—(AP.)—Financial markets resumed their forward push today in the wake of the farming boom, but the swift pace was cut down somewhat by heavy realizing in all categories.

Wheat again proved the bellwether with advances of 4 or more cents a bushel, but corn, rye, oats and barley were only slightly behind. Profit-taking shaded most of these gains, however, in later trading. Cotton got up about $1 a bale before turning back to around its closing level of yesterday. Bar silver reflected optimistic activities at the London economic conference with a spurt of 1⅛ cents an ounce to 36¼ cents. The British pound sterling advanced to a post-gold standard high at $4.35½ and leading European exchanges reached new peaks for the past year or more.

Trading in the share market was extremely active most of the day with the ticker tape generally several minutes later than floor transactions. Rail stocks, aside from a few of the recently spurting industrtial specialties, were in greatest demand. Peak prices were attained in the first hour or so and then there was a moderate softening of quotations.

With commodity prices reaching for higher and higher levels and factory production expanding, financial interests are now paying particular attention to the important matter of consumption. While trade reviews report increased public buying in most of the large centers of the country, the proportion, or ratio, of consumption is still considerably behind production in many lines.

At the same time, it is pointed out, the big spending program of the government has not yet had time to reflect expanded incomes and until this phase of national improvement becomes more defined, consumption estimates must necessarily be highly conjectural.

In addition to the close scrutiny of business advancement, market followers are intermittently disturbed by rumors that some European nations on the gold standard may abandon this monetary base as a protection against recent heavy speculative runs. It is felt in most banking circles that if France or Holland should sever the golden tie, Switzerland and Belgium would have to follow suit.

There is much confusion as to the effects on American securities and exchange of a general abandonment of gold. In some quarters the opinion is expressed that there might be a sharp drop in prices here with the dollar climbing briskly in terms of European exchanges. Others, however, feel that world-wide inflation would follow gold divorcement and that prices in the United States would bound upward under the impetus of further currency expansion.

WHEAT SCORES SMASHING RISE

CHICAGO, June 27.—Alternate wild advances and setbacks swept wheat up more than 6 cents today above yesterday's 73⅞ cents gain and at times took about 2 cents off the maximum.

At the extreme top figures today, wheat showed a rise of about 21 cents over last week's low, and more than 52 cents since the beginning of the season. Indications of showers over part of the wheat belt, giving promise of at least a little relief from drought and destructive high temperatures, were largely responsible for huge profit-taking operations and for temporary downturns from maximum prices, but highest prices of the day were reached in the final quarter of an hour.

Wheat closed excited, at somewhat below new top figures, but 5¾ to 6⅜ above yesterday's finish, corn 3 to 3⅞ up, oats 2 to 3 cents advanced, and provisions at a rise of 5 to 30 cents.

WHEAT PROCESS TAX TO BE 30c

WASHINGTON, June 27.—(AP.)—Administrators of the farm act plant to levy a 30-cent a bushel processing tax on wheat, despite the recent sharp rise in grain prices. The administrators intend making announcement either late today or tomorrow.

They have authority to levy a processing tax on wheat used in milling flour and manufacturing other food products for human consumption equal to the difference between the "current farm price" and the "parity price" based on pre-war farm prices.

On this basis of price relationships, early in June administrators could levy a tax of 30 cents a bushel.

The rise in wheat prices has narrowed the gap between current and pre-war average farm prices. If this is recognized it would cut the tax rate substantially.

There is no provision in the farm act in the opinion of administrators, however, which requires Wallace to use the price relationships of the last week or two weeks before the tax goes into effect. Instead he can use averages for six months or any other period if he desires, they believe.

We anchored, late that afternoon, again at the mouth of the Sepik. There was no need to hurry, and outside, beneath the disarming quiet of the Pacific, lay submerged islands and mountain peaks that were better dealt with at daybreak than nightfall. The rain had stopped, leaving the evening sweet.

The Nuloa seemed singularly empty; of the sizable crowd that had set out aboard her from Madang, only the skipper, the engineer and the mate remained, and myself. Even the kanakas seemed a bit forlorn, with the native passengers gone from the foredeck.

Night dropped swiftly and serenely. Out toward sea there was a baleful red glow against the sky—the island volcano.

The engineer and the skipper disappeared below deck, and 10 minutes later Capt. Alys reappeared in pajamas, clutching his mattress and pillow and sheet in his short arms. He was in one of his moods, and he spread his bed up forward by the binnacle, and stretched out on it. Nobody spoke to him; one mustn't speak to Capt. Alys when he fell to brooding. But I could distinguish the outline of his short, well-set form through the soft dusk, and the glow of his cigaret as he lay looking up at the stars.

We knew he was thinking of his dead wife. Years ago, out in Fiji, he had carried her for months aboard this same schooner, trying to bring her back to sanity and health. I think perhaps it was the memory of her that had influenced the skipper to take me along on this cruise; the thought of having a woman aboard may have made her seem nearer. I think, too, that my presence sometimes sent him into the deep and brooding moods. And then, I suppose, he regretted having weakened in my favor, for nowhere is a man's world more masculine than on a South Pacific schooner. But he never told me so.

AVOIDS TROUBLE

The mate and I droned a low-toned conversation about our successful negotiation of the Sepik, and about Jim and Brearly. I related to him all that we had seen and done ashore, for never did he set foot off the schooner. I asked him why that was an inflexible rule of his, and he said that if he went ashore he might get into trouble—might drink. He didn't trust himself. He said: "I've been as low as a man can get; I was working with a pick-ax on roads along with kanakas out in Suva. The Old Man," and he nodded at the sleeping skipper, "found me one day; I'd been his mate once. I wasn't worth much when he came across me in Suva. But he took me on his schooner, signed me on. I didn't think I could pull myself together again. But because a human being took an interest in me when I'd sunk to about the level of swine, I made up my mind I'd try to be a man again."

The mate rolled me a cigaret and passed it over to me. His tobacco was rank, but I had smoked the first ones so heroically that he was sure I liked them, and would hand me a supply of them from time to time. Gradually I began to acquire a taste for them.

A HANDSOME MAN

I don't know what philosophy the mate had worked out for himself, if any; he seemed to have a certain spiritual serenity which perhaps was simply fatalism. But he was a rank atheist.

The mate had been cut in the pattern of splendid men. He had been handsome, was still handsome, for that matter, except for his haggard mouth. Even in dungarees and a woolen shirt, and barefooted, which was his usual appearance, he looked like a gentleman. To me he was courteous and always kind. In fact, he liked me, and could not help knowing that I liked him.

I asked the mate once why he didn't marry, settle down, and stop his futile and ceaseless wandering among the islands. He was just the sort of man who would love to have a woman caring for him, and even fussing a bit over him and making him comfortable. He had had prodigally of the things of youth. He said: "I've done a lot of thinking lately. In ten years I'll be fifty-two, and what will I have in life? No chick or no child of my own kind; no one to care whether I live or die. But I can't ask a white woman to marry me now."

ONCE A TRADER

In the course of our conversation he also told me about the Gilbert Islands and the girl he had loved out there.

It was after he had lost command of a ship in New Zealand that he drifted out to the Gilberts. He set himself up as a trader, even acquired a small cocoanut plantation. He lived there four years among the natives, and for the most part like them. He didn't actually "go native," from which state a white man rarely wrests back either his own self-respect or that of natives or other whites; but he adapted himself to Micronesian manners and pursuits, and lived garbed in a lap-lap solely, save once every six months or so when a ship called at the islands and he went forth to meet his own kind.

He took a native girl for his mistress. Whenever the mate spoke of Tam-ma he always added, "She was a sweet little kid." She was only about fifteen. And she adored him. Her mother and father, honest Gilbertians, were pleased with the alliance. It is an honor to have a white master attach one's daughter; it brings with it much prestige, even when he has at length deserted her. And the mate and Tam-ma and her parents lived in harmony in a grass house that he built for them. When he took Tam-ma he told her he wanted no children, to which she rather doubtfully acquiesed.

"She had beautiful long straight black hair—it reached half way down to her knees," went on the mate, his eyes back in the Gilberts. "And it was my job, the last thing every night, to plait it into two long braids. She was just a little thing"—his hand indicated the height of his chest—"and only fifteen. But Lord, she was a sweet little kid!"

STABBED BY GIRL

Things went on happily between them for a while, but one day Tam-ma came to him and pleaded that she wanted just one baby. She wanted a boy-child, wanted it tearfully. Visible entanglements were against the mate's better judgement.

The mate paused to roll a cigarette, chuckling as he did so. "She knifed me one day." I had frequently noticed a thin scar on his weather-browned neck. "It was one morning early, and I was coming back to our island in a canoe. You see, she was going to have a baby, and I got restless and had strayed from the fold. She met me on the beach as usual, with "Good morning!" Then quick as a flash she sprang at me, and sent the knife into my neck. Fortunately it hit the collar-bone, and didn't do much damage."

"What did you do?" I asked.

"Oh I wrenched the knife out of her hand and flung it away. Then she began sobbing and I held her in my arms until she stopped. After that everything was all right again."

The first baby was a girl and later a boy was born.

"What are your children's names mate?" I asked.

"Mary and Tomasi."

"Do you love them—your children?"

"I can't say I feel a paternal love for them; the little boy I never really knew. I loved their little mother; a white man feels a certain tenderness for a half-savage girl who is his, body and soul, which is a thing entirely apart from the love he might feel for a white woman."

SAILED AWAY

"And what of Tam-ma now?"

"Shortly after the little boy was born I was offered command of another windjammer. I took it. I was to be gone two years. I went to my little girl and explained. 'Now, before I go, wouldn't you like me to marry you?' She was pretty much broken up about my leaving, but she surprised me by her common sense. She said: 'No. If you love me you will come back. If you don't, being married to you will do no good.'"

"Did you go back?"

"Yes, I did. It was nearly two years later. But I never really saw her again. One evening, just at sunset, I brought my ship into the lagoon. As I entered the harbor I saw an outrigger glide across the water, and in it was Tam-ma and a native boy. I found she had married, and he having discovered that my ship was coming into harbor, had her taken to another island. I felt that she was happy, I didn't interfere. I saw the two kiddies, though. They were pretty youngsters. But they didn't know who I was. A day or two after that I left the Gilberts, and I've never been back since."

"But, mate, don't you feel any responsibility for your children?" I persisted. "Would you like to educate them?"

"I have provided for them. Before I left her to go to sea I bought her some land with yielding cocoanut trees on it, which would bring her shillings enough if she wants to pick up the nuts. But I wouldn't think of taking the children away from the islands; they would only go native again and be miserable. No, leave half-caste children in the islands. They will grow up and marry other half-castes, and probably be happy. Certainly they have a better chance of it there than among whites."

There was neither apology nor braggadocio in the mate's chronicling of himself; he was the usual not-very-strong white man in the South Sea. But there was nothing of the despoiler about him. Underneath all the muck of years in the South Pacific something fundamentally fine showed through, and could be depended upon.

I asked the mate whether he would ever like to go back to Scotland, back to his own people. He said: "There have been times when I wanted to go back, but I never will now. Nobody cares anything about me back there—except the old lady."

"The old lady?"

"My mother. I used to write to her once in a while, but I haven't now for five years or more. She owns some ships, coaling ships. When my father died she wrote and asked me to come home and take charge of them. But I knew if I did my relatives would say I had come back to get what I could out of her. It would have looked that way, too. So I told her I wanted to stay out here. I made up my mind that I would never go back until I was a success. But I'd like to see the old lady before she dies."

The Beauty Box

By HELEN FOLLETT

Nail polish of coral is an improvement upon the gory red of which we are all sick and tired. Coral rouge is becoming more and more a favorite with those darlings who apply the synthetic blush, and who among us doesn't? It's a bit too light for lip coloring which inclines toward the natural shade which is a deep red with a slightly bluish cast, almost raspberry. All make-up is being toned down by discriminating ladies who don't want to "look like that."

Enlarged pores are a tough proposition. To correct them a new skin structure must be built. Highly energized sebaceous glands and a diet rich in fats and starches are probably at the root of this trouble. Treatment consists of warm, soapy facial tubbings followed by cold rinsings, ice rubs, lavings with witch hazel. Cut out fats and pastries. Drink six or eight glasses of water a day. Bathe often to relieve the strain on facial glands.

JUNIOR PATROL PLEDGE

I promise to help children less fortunate than I am.
I promise to do my best to make my parents proud of me.
I promise to watch carefully when crossing streets and to aid other children in keeping out of danger.
I promise to be a 100% Junior Patrol member.

Address this pledge to the JUNIOR PATROL, Sun-Telegraph, Pittsburgh, Pa. Upon its receipt you will be registered as a member of the JUNIOR PATROL and will be forwarded a membership card and an official emblem.

Junior Patrol Club Members To Help Others

That is the way a person acquainted with the sea and its sailing ships might explain the launching of hundreds of Junior Patrol clubs throughout the circulation area of the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

First let's imagine that your Patrol is a little ship. In charge or in command is a Captain and a First Lieutenant, which you have selected by popular vote.

On board are the members of your Patrol—all the boys and girls along your street or in your neighborhood who have joined the Junior Patrol. Maybe there are only four or five in your crew altogether, perhaps there are as many as 20. That is up to the members of the Patrol to decide.

MIXED GROUPS

In some cases the boys will want nothing but boys to belong to their patrol club. In other instances the girls will want only girls in their club. Such a plan is entirely possible. It all depends on what your personal opinion on the matetr is.

However, you will find many times that it is greatly advantageous to have a mixed group in your patrol. The Junior Patrol has been organized to help others at home, at school and at play. Services that the boys cannot perform can be left to the girls, and what the girls cannot do should be left for the boys.

As we said every patrol ship has many interesting and cheerful things to look forward to.

At sea when a boat gets in trouble it always sends out a S. O. S. Every Junior Patrol ship is supposed to answer those S. O. S. calls. It means "Save Our Ship."

In real life those calls for help will come from boys and girls in your neighborhood. You are supposed to help them as much as possible.

Take for instance the letter from Jean Scott, of 42 Ella street, Leetsdale, Pa. She says:

"I live on a street right beside the railroad, so I think I should watch for small children playing near the tracks."

There is a perfect example of how a patrol can help others. It is an example of how one little girl is even saving human life. Jean should be given all the praise in the world for performing such a fine task.

FIRST CLUB FORMED

To Marion L. Swart, of 246 Park avenue, Washington, Pa., goes the record of forming the first Junior Patrol Club—at least the first patrol that we have received any record of. In a letter she says:

"I organized a Junior Patrol Club June 13 in my neighborhood and about two weeks ago I sent the names of 15 members, including myself, to the Sun-Telegraph. But we have not received our membership cards and official emblems. When I saw and read your topic "Junior Patrol Members Urged To Organize Clubs" in the Sun-Telegraph I was surprised because my club has been organized 11 days and we have had four meetings. In case you have not received our pledges let me know. We are eager to see our emblems and membership cards."

The Sun-Telegraph, Junior and Quin Hall wants Marion to know that her letter is being given particular attention and that she will shortly receive the pins and cards. Thanks to her for her fine attitude.

The Maple Creek Junior Patrol, of Charleroi, with a membership of 35 boys and girls, is holding a party tomorrow night at the home of Richard Smith. Anna Mary Crow is captain of the patrol, while Elmer Strauser is first lieutenant. We hope the party is a big success.

You will find more Junior Patrol news in this column tomorrow. Be sure to watch this column and don't forget to let us know if you have formed your patrol as yet.

Snippy Song of the Snout
(A Nosegay for the Schnozzolo)

Oh, nose, you're quite the thing to blow about!
It must be faced you're not one to be snubbed,
And there's the rub! Toes exist but to be stubbed,
One knows; yet tho' a grindstone to the snout
Will cause the mouth to do much more than pout,
The run of ordinary noses (dubbed
The "pug," the "roman," "barrymore") when clubbed
Is bloody business; ask any pug or tout!

(Chanted Interlude*)

You sniffle and sneer (though it's nasty to say it),
You snort and you snarl when striking a snag,
But allus when hungry 'tis "Put on the nosebag!"
No yes-man whose onions he knows like a grocer
So much for the snore and the sneeze of a snuff-head;
Enough has been said on such stuff, so's enough said!

(Resume the Chorus.)

Now, thanks to plastic surgery we pick
Our nose to suit our beak and face; but thumb
The snoot in sniffed salute—a snobby trick
To snigger at all snide remarks, but dumb.
Hail, nostril! It's herein been tweaked a lot!
The kerchief's closest friend? Indeed it's not!

SOME PLAIN TALK

(From the Lamar, Mo., Democrat)

We have received a letter from a citizen of Iantha concerning the conduct of young men at that place. We learn that many of them are profane and need the care of parents. Owing to the crowded condition of our columns we are unable to give the letter in full. But something must be done to check this growth of profanity. Iantha was at one time one of the most orderly towns in the country, but it is fast losing that reputation.

Give Us a New Club

Tough on a Saturday afternoon golfer when he slices a putt to the four winds. His caddy shakes his head and says, "Once-a-weeker."

What are the once-a-weekers going to do about it? If you only play on Saturdays that makes you a bum golfer.

If you play every day in the week that makes you a good golfer and a bum too.

slowly, comes through like a registered letter, gets his wrists into the recipe and knocks the agate over the enchanted hills.

But the once-a-weeker cannot do that. He is as awkward as an overturned turtle in a rock garden. His back swing is spasmodic, his follow through is jerky and his drive is a slow trot.

He is in the woods so often and so long that the bees hive up on him. A bad score not only means poor golf, but also an attack of poison ivy.

Yet, if the once-a-weeker gets out there Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, he is still a once-a-weeker in chronological order. His game doesn't improve any. He still has that Saturday afternoon complex.

Let the caddies shake their heads all they desire. The paths of glory lead but to the bunker and the sand trap. If your game gets too good you cannot enjoy the movies on a rainy holiday.

We will continue to play once every week and to do the best we can with the cleek, the spoon and the spade. They are all different shapes on the smacking ends. But they don't smack.

It would be better for the intermittent duffer if some divot engineer figured out a sensible club that would be a combination of ice tongs, salad fork and nutcracker.

With a club like this, you could either swing on the pill, scratch its sassy face, dissect it or hammer it into the ground to be hidden forever from the furtive gaze of super-intelligent caddies.

The City's Interest

Officials Should Give Views to County Commissioners Regarding Acquisition of Wabash Bridge and Tunnel.

While the law does not place upon Pittsburgh city officials any responsibility or authority in the negotiations for or conclusion of the purchase of the Wabash bridge and tunnel for a new South Side traffic artery, it is undeniable that the city has an interest in the proposition which should not be overlooked.

The Board of County Commissioners finally will decide what, if anything, shall be done about this project, action on which has been hanging fire for two years, now revived through the probability that federal money can be procured for the financing.

But before that decision there should be conferences between the county and city officials. If necessary, the city authorities should initiate the request for the conference. There is little likelihood it would be refused by the county, for the community of interest between the two governments on this or any other public works project which has a direct attachment to the city of Pittsburgh is obvious.

That was recognized in the Town Hall bond issue, the enabling act providing the city with a voice in the selection of a site, providing it was in Pittsburgh. This was recognition of the fact that the city was to be considered from the standpoint of traffic congestion and other considerations which are purely urban.

No such written jointure of interest pertains to the bridge and tunnel subject. Yet the mingling of interest is as great or greater than in the Town Hall. City traffic experts should be called into consultation by the county authorities, to set forth the traffic conditions which will result from the reconstruction of the tunnel and bridge, should that finally be authorized. Every related problem should be considered in the first instance, that there shall be no repetition of blunders of the past.

The bridge was constructed with a northern outlet which took little or no note of city traffic problems, pouring a flood into narrow Sixth avenue. At first there was no provision for anything approaching a direct turn for inbound traffic from the boulevard to the bridge.

At the northern portal of the tubes no provision was made for grade separation, and the result has been a congested tangle for which various stratagems have been devised, none so far proving practicable. Eventually grade separation must come, but if it had been done in the first place there would have been a saving in cost, in facilitating the movement of traffic and in general efficiency.

The city should make its views on the Wabash project known in no uncertain terms, those views to be adopted after a thorough study by engineering experts.

Coal Men Get in Line

Local Operators Settle Differences And Present United Front On Code Problem.

After weeks of bickering, the coal producers of Western Pennsylvania have buried their minor grievances and have decided to present a united front in the formulation of a code of fair business practices under the provisions of the industrial recovery act.

This step is of vital importance to the welfare of Pittsburgh. Coal has been the weak sister of our industrial family for eight years. The history of coal during this period has been marked by broken agreements, by oppression of labor, by strikes, by human suffering and bloodshed.

The story of coal, if anyone ever should take the trouble to write it properly and honestly, would be like a tale of barbarians rather than an account of events which took place in modern civilized communities.

Some of the horrors of coal have been due to mere human shortsightedness, some to avarice, some may be laid at the door of local operators, some at the door of producers of other districts.

Whether we like the idea of a government dictatorship of business or not, the work which Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, industrial czar, is trying to do holds out the promise of restoring order and decency to the chaotic coal industry.

One of the basic troubles of the industry has been the wage policy of the southern producers. These operators have continually cut prices in order to invade markets formerly held by the north. They have been able to do this by cutting the wages of their miners to starvation levels.

At present some southern mines are paying as little as 18 cents an hour for common labor while some northern mines are paying 40 to 45 cents. This is an extreme example of the discrepancy between wage scales, but the general ratio is materially higher in the Pittsburgh district than in mines of Kentucky and other southern states.

While many of the actions of our local operators cannot be justified, some of their tactics have been forced upon them by the competition of producers of other fields where labor has been squeezed to a bare subsistence.

The adoption of a code for the coal industry extends the hope that oppression of labor and ruinous competition may be replaced by decent working conditions and wages as well as by sane business practices.

Pittsburgh needs such a change. The decision of coal men of this district to work together to accomplish this purpose represents a step in the right direction.

A Notable Bequest

There Is Genuine Need of Such an Institution as Is Provided for by Mrs. R. J. McCready.

As the wife of a veteran physician and a woman of wide observation, Mrs. Matilda S. McCready, of Sewickley, had exceptional opportunities for noting where philanthropy could be applied most effectively.

That she utilized these opportunities is demonstrated by her will, filed for probate Saturday, in which she provides that a large part of her estate, valued in excess of $1,000,000, shall be used for the establishment of a home for women afflicted with curable neurotic or mild mental ailments.

The facts submitted in connection with the effort to have the commonwealth establish a state psychiatric hospital in Pittsburgh have shown a genuine need for such an institution as Mrs. McCready's benevolence now makes possible.

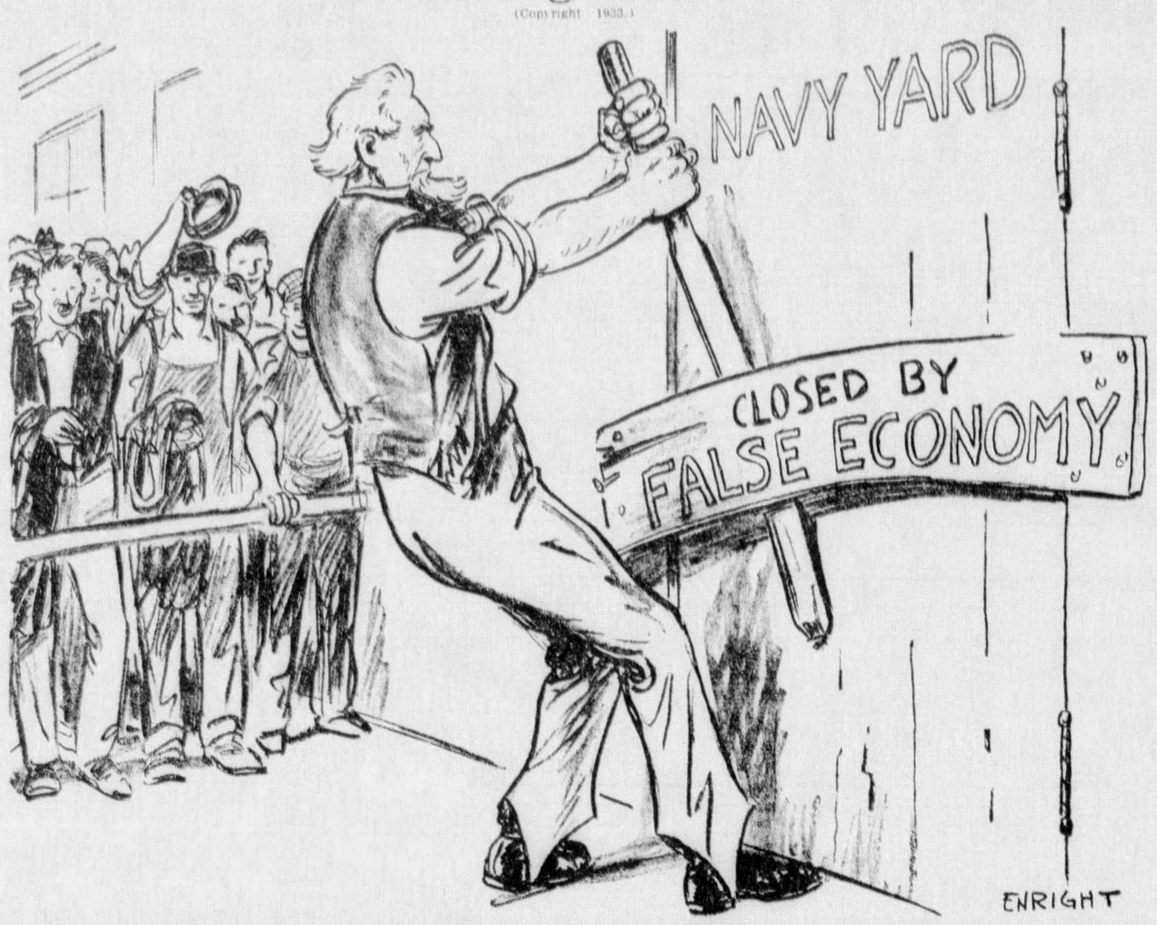
The Right Idea

(Copyright, 1933.)



With Congress authorizing expenditure of three billion three hundred million dollars to stimulate industry in this country, the federal administration acted wisely in deciding that two hundred and forty-eight million dollars of that money should go to national defense.

Disarmament pacts and pacifism have reduced our Navy to third rank among the great Powers instead of maintaining our established policy of a Navy "equal to the strongest."

The new program calls for thirty-two warships to cost two hundred and thirty-eight million dollars and 290 Navy airplanes at ten million dollars.

Our aviation industry—essential for the national safety—will be helped.

Our navy and ship yards will be reopened, as they should be, and thousands of skilled workers will be redeemed from the ranks of the jobless.

We have the men, we have the money—and we are going to have the ships!

These Modern Lovers

It is a real comfort to a modern man to meet an old-fashioned girl who will wait until he decides whether or not he WANTS to kiss her before assuming that expectant attitude.

It's funny how hard it is for a woman to think back and remember just what it was about her husband that made her divorce him when you ask her suddenly.

Now that the radio has become a miracle, the screen a fine art and racketeering a science, some brilliant genius ought to get busy and invent a few modern improvements on marriage, which would make it synchronize with love more smoothly and effectively.

Plenty of love is the best capital for the matrimonial partnership. Love is the only thing which enables a man to put up with a woman's nerves and caprices and a woman to endure a man's moods and grouches, without losing their mental balance.

Most moderns, who speak of our "high standard of living," appear to refer to good plumbing, smart cars and all the latest electric appliances rather than to high standards of honor, ideals and self-respect. Which is hitting a "new low!"

OUR RHYMING OPTIMIST

By Aline Michaelis

Of Duty and Desire

Desire is such a lovely lass,
She beckons me her way
And carols of a land she knows
With song and flowers gay.
Desire is such a winsome maid,
Who would not follow her?
For she can make the pulses race
And set dream-wings astir!

But duty has a stronger lure,
Though of a nun-like mien;
Her look is glamorous as dawn
And duty has a voice as clear
As any silver flute,
And when she calls to me, the song
Of fair desire seems mute.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, June 27. — The speakeasy phenom of the past three years has been that sedate cloister a hop-skip off the avenue in the 50's, known as "No. 21." It sets back from the street, has two well-kept patches of greenery and forbidding high iron fence. Also lancet windows, fringed with creeper.

It has been raided but once, and then, the legend goes, a "fix" to reduce rent. "No. 21" was headlined as a tryst for Libby Holman and Smith Reynolds. And clientele flexes from stage folk to the bonbonniverius of the Social Register. On the ground floor a bar. On three upper floors dining rooms.

Admittance has developed into somewhat a parliamentary affair. Unless one is thoroughly known, it requires diplomacy to pass the portals. The only exception was a visitor from Ft. Worth—one guess only!—who, when denied passport, announced grimly no one else might enter until he had been vised. He slid in pronto.

The proprietors are dilettanti known in speakeasy lingo as Jack and Charlie. So enormous were their profits they have opened up a week-end castle in Westchester accoutered with all the swank of a fashionable country club. And Jack and Charlie employ their leisure riding to hounds, heigh ho!

They still work away upon the Cathedral of St. John the Divine, a job requiring more than 20 years and still unfinished. I stopped in the other dusk and felt the affection churches invariably extend pilgrims. A kindly, deaf verger—a double for George Arliss sans monocle—detached from a group to offer service. I told him I just wanted to ramble. "I understand," he said, and tip-toed away.

* * *

Near the great church I tumbled upon a contrasting mood. A shirt-sleeved pipe-smoker was airing a white poodle on a leash. A plus-foured owner of a police dog, coming toward him, allowed his charge loose. Like most police dog owners, he wanted to show perfect control and did not heed. The poodle received a nip in the hindquarters and plus fours a beautiful sock in the jaw. And did I go skipping down the lane!

Long Island City is America's most baseball-conscious municipality—outside of Pittsburgh. Each nightfall and Sunday are a hundred and more sandlot exhibits, ranging from kids to settle-marrieds. Fallen stars such as Larry Doyle and Huge McQuillen are chalked as players on fence bulletins. Each game has a crowd. Sometimes fisticuffs and now and then a bat swings. The pastime brings out an army of ptomaine peddlers, whose potations include everything from penny hokey-pokey to the 6-cent royal gorge of a hot dog imbedded in sauerkraut, called Bix Alex!

* * *

The tug of morbidity for the Queens County courthouse is also pronounced on Sunday. Crowds drift to the ancient red-bricked structure and stand a long time—staring and whispering. It was where Ruth Snyder and Judd were tried.

* * *

During days of his art editorship of a trade magazine, for which I was occasional contributor, I met Albert Snyder, slain husband of Ruth. He had the sensitiveness of the deaf. Melancholy had marked him. There is no analogy, of course, but I have known three other men, besides Snyder, who met violent deaths at hands of killers. In every case, particularly that of Arnold Rothstein, the victims were men of unsmiling glumness who seemed to shrink from life's contacts for one reason or another.

The furore in France for youthful beards swept to New York. John Hutchins, the diction expert in his early 30's, has unfurled a set of jodavidsons to to the breeze. John Vandercook, Jr., also lends the boulevards an hirsute hurrah. This afternoon I saw a couple of bamboo cane-twisters in front of Lindy's abloom with vandykes. Bob Scripps luxuriated magnificent foliage a couple of years ago, but became clean shaven when he suspected a fad was incubating.

When I feel life closing in I often dream of a Brittany chateau, in a walled-in garden, a flowing beard and long walks with M. le Cure. But none of the sissy beards. I want the sort in which one may always stir up a thrush or a few field mice. Like grandpa's.

LISTEN, WORLD

By Elsie Robinson

Strange days in Washington! Rich people on the spot, and they can't understand.

Why should they be treated like common gangsters?

Why should their private financial dealings be publicly exposed, as though they were criminal acts?

Never, they insist furiously, have they done a deliberately dishonest deed. Always they've kept within the law—and produce the record as proof.

And their equally indignant friends and neighbors produce even stronger proof. They point to the thousands given to charity; to countless kindly services to the unfortunate; to shining years spent as good neighbors, devoted husbands, loving friends.

What have they done to deserve this?

They, personally, may have done nothing to deserve this.

BUT THE SYSTEM BY WHICH THEY LIVED HAS DONE PLENTY!

That complicated System of High Finance—with the big profits for the Big Fellows and the leavings for the Little Fellows. We're beginning to see its viciousness now; but we didn't always see its viciousness. In fact, we thought it was a mighty fine system. We pointed to it with pride.

AND WE WERE QUITE AS WILLING TO PROFIT BY IT, ONCE AS WERE THE BIG FELLOWS. IN FACT—AND WE MIGHT AS WELL ADMIT IT—WE WOULD ALL HAVE DONE EXACTLY AS THE BIG FELLOWS DID IF WE'D HAD THEIR CHANCE.

But we didn't have their chance. And that was exactly where the System fell down—

IT HELD CHANCES FOR ONLY A FEW.

IT HELD CHANCES FOR ONLY THE VERY STRONG, THE VERY BRIGHT OR THE VERY RUTHLESS.

It was a swell System for them. But it was a cruel System for the Little Fellow.

And because of that, the System is on the skids—and the Big Fellows who profited by it are on the spot. For any System which doesn't give the Little Fellows a break is a bad System, and will smash in the end.

And the reason for that is plain. Most of us are Little Fellows. Most of us aren't strong enough, or bright or brave or ruthless enough, to win out in the bitter warfare of the System we've been following. For every one man who can buck that game, there are ten thousand who can't.

NOR IS IT THEIR FAULT.

THEY DIDN'T CHOOSE TO BE WEAK AND SLOW AND TIMID AND A LITTLE STUPID. THEY WERE MADE THAT WAY.

And, as a matter of fact, that's a perfectly natural way for men to be made. Discounting all the malnutrition, the bad breeding, rotten environment and vicious training from which we suffer, it's still perfectly natural and normal for most of us to be born a little stupid and slow, weak and timid.

So the System didn't merely buck the Golden Rule. It also bucked human nature.

IT TRIED TO SERVE CIVILIZED SOCIETY WITH A BARBAROUS JUNGLE CODE.

And now civilized society is slowly but surely kicking it out. For the human race will not permanently tolerate any system which does not serve the WHOLE race. IT DARE NOT TOLERATE SUCH A SYSTEM. The Big Fellow may dish it out for a long, long, time, and the Little Fellow may be forced to take it. But inevitably, the Little Fellow, in his awful numbers, goaded by his terrible necessity, will arise and demand a new deal.

You ARE your brother's keeper. If you won't keep him, he won't keep you.

And so the Big Shots, who never did a deliberately dishonest or unkind thing in all their lives, are on the spot—and they can't see why.

They're on the spot because the System they served was a rotten system. And it doesn't matter much whether you're innocently high minded or deliberately hard boiled, when you profit by a rotten System.

TO THE LITTLE FELLOW THE RESULTS ARE ALL THE SAME. YOU'RE JUST PART OF THE RACKET THAT GYPPED HIM!

The Human Side of the News

President Roosevelt's Great Muscle Shoals Project —The Romantic Tennessee River—A Nocturnal Vigil at Shiloh

By EDWIN C. HILL

THE President of the United States has conceived a vast scheme as the basis of regaining prosperity. That scheme is to take a tremendous area of the Southeast, covering 640,000 square miles in 10 states, for a daring experiment on reforestation, flood control, the navigation of rivers and power development.

With Muscle Shoals, on the Tennessee River, as the starting point, he has launched a plan to save old forests and build new; to make new, rich farmlands from swamps; to create new villages and towns, and thousands of miles of road; to bring into being thousands of commercial enterprises and hundreds of thousands of farms. It is the most ambitious and daring scheme that has been offered to the people by a new President.

Some people hail Franklin D. Roosevelt as a great visionary. Others call him a great gambler. Others believe he is a great statesman. Only the result will show. It might be the very thing—this gigantic Muscle Shoals project—to break the back of the depression and to start the wheels turning once more. At least it is certain that no leader ever got anywhere who lacked the imagination to conceive a great project and the courage to tackle it.

* * *

The Tennessee A Romantic River

MUSCLE SHOALS is situated on the Tennessee River, a wandering, romantic stream, more romantic in some ways than the Mississippi, "Old Man River" himself. It comes into being, the Tennessee, near Knoxville, formed by small streams that tumble down from the mountains of the Carolinas and of the State of Tennessee. It flows swiftly through almost unbroken forests on its way to Chattanooga, and on the way it is joined by the Hiwassee, on which is Maggie's Mill. At that spot a young man very much in love, wrote a song that our grandfathers used to sing, "When You and I Were Young, Maggie"—wrote it to the miller's daughter.

The Tennessee goes gliding along into Moccasin Bend at Chattanooga, hastens past the frowning ramparts of Lookout Mountain, turns toward Georgia but changes its mind, and flows on through the low, rolling hills into Alabama. There it changes its mind again, turns almost to the right about and rushes back through Tennessee, as if in regret that ever it could have dreamed of leaving such a charming land. At Muscle Shoals it drops away, and that is what Muscle Shoals is, and what gives Muscle Shoals its power—that drop in the bed of the Tennessee River.

Finally it sweeps on northward, in its 900 mile course watering wheat, tobacco and cotton—the river of the gumbo country, the apple cider and the mint julep country, the land of hot cakes and corn syrup and hot biscuits—until weary from its tortuous journey, it joins the Ohio at Paducah, Kentucky. From Lookout Mountain, where I once stood with President Harding, one gets a wonderful picture of this curving, lazy journey of the romantic Tennessee; of the great bend of the Moccasin, of the shoals and of the sweep of storied country that has know so much joy and gallantry and sorrow.

* * *

A Memorable Experience at Shiloh

BUT of all the places along the Tennessee where chance has led my feet, the river's bank at Shiloh left the unforgettable memory—provided a strange and unforgettable experience. It was years ago, and I had gone down there with Indiana people to dedicate Indiana's battle monuments on the field of one of the hardest fought battles between the North and the South. The Governor of the State was in the party, and Senator Beveridge and various Congressmen and state notables. There was a good deal of speechmaking after we went ashore from the steamboat which had brought us up the Tennessee from Danville, and when the speechmaking was over I looked for some means to send the story to my paper.

There was no telegraph office for miles around, and the only telephone was in the one general store of the scattering village in the pine scrub. I managed to telephone the story, and when I had finished my work I walked back past old Shiloh Church and in the gathering dusk took the road toward the river.

By the time I had trudged the two miles in the silent, lonely forest, a luminous darkness had fallen over the Tennessee and its banks. Just ahead was the steamboat, with its hospitable lights. As I started down the slope to the river edge, a voice called softly from the deeper shadows. A little startled, I turned and made out a dim, wraithlike figure under the ruin of what had once been a great tree, and when I came near I saw that it was a girl standing there, a very beautiful and charming girl who bore a great name. She had come down from the North with us and I had walked about the battlefields with her in the afternoon. When I stood beside her she went on to speak in a low voice, almost as if she were under a spell. She said:

* * *

Where a General Waited for His Army

"WOULD you mind standing here with me a little while—under this tree? My grandfather stood here for hours on such a night as this. The Confederates had pushed his army back almost to the river. The other part of his army, which had failed to arrive that day, was somewhere off over there, across the river, away off somewhere. He could not know. But if it didn't come up that night his army would be driven into the river on the morrow. And for hours and hours he stood under this very tree, all alone, smoking his cigar, speaking to no man. And finally, very late in the night, he knew that the army was saved."

And so Nellie Grant and the young newspaper reporter stood there, side by side, under the wreck of the great old tree which had sheltered Ulysses S. Grant, on that night of April 6, 1862. I know that pictures formed and sounds arose in the night-sounds that had not echoed in that lonely and tragic countryside in a lifetime. Across the Tennessee I strained my eyes, searching for something — something. And presently, after what may have been a long time or only a little while, arose the low thunder of an advancing army. I felt the presence across the river of a great host—Buell's army of 25,000 coming in the nick of time, to save the day for the silent Grant, smoking his cigar under that very tree.

Then we went hand in hand down the river bank to the steamboat, where there was nothing but light and laughter and living men.

ONCE OVERS

By J. J. Mundy

Is it that when you look about, you see the production of so many ranks so high, that you are afraid to undertake things?

Your trouble may be that you want to jump into first place without preliminary instructions or practice.

You have heard so-called experts in different lines or arts say that "they never took a lesson."

You have noticed the high in the standard of excellence certain others seem to stand in the community or the school which you attend.

It makes it seem a lost cause, before you begin the work you aspire to do, or the task to which you are assigned.

In the first place, the greatest experts are not so "untaught" as they would have you believe.

You may have more ability, more original touch, a finer perception of requirements than others, but your inferiority complex is spoiling your chance of advancement.
